MA CHAN-SHAN'S DARING EXPLOITS IN DEFENDING MANCHURIA

CE SELECTIONS

FOR TO-DAY

The Thirteenth Extra Race Meeting to be held at Happy Valley this afternoon should produce racing of a very high order. The turf is in excellent condition, and it will not be surprising if one or two records go by the board. Mr. Frost who is well mounted stands an exceptionally good chance, of annexing all three St. Legers and may well establish a new precedent in the annals of racing in the Colony. The Hong Kong St. Leger, the fourth race on the programme, will be the big event of the day, but the Fremantle St. Leger for Australian ponies will doubtless provide a more thrilling race and a more open one. The Sub-Girls St. Leger completes the trio of main events and a very classy field has been entered.

The programme opens with the appearance of a bunch of "A" class ponies in the Shik-O Handicap. For the winner however, one looks no farther than Mr. L. Dunbar's Glenagles, which will be ridden by Mr. Frost, who will be the jockey to follow. Bag and Baggage looks a likely thing for a place.

Tax Sought From Mah Jongg

The Canton Government's ban on mah jongg, recently enforced, is said to be an outgrowth of agitation to have the game made illegal except in such places as it would be possible to tax. Mah jongg in the home, it was urged, should be abolished, but might well be encouraged in restaurants, upon which a tax might be levied and the income of the Government swelled.

DENTISTS REGISTERED.

It is announced in the Government Gazette that the names of Messrs. Hin In-sang, Han Shing-wan and Sik Leung-kwong have been added to the Dental Register.

DISSENTION IN THE CABINET—At the Cabinet meeting, at No. 10, Downing Street, to consider the Ottawa Legislation, three Cabinet Ministers handed in their resignations. Sir Herbert Samuel (the Home Secretary), arriving. He resigned.

POLICE POWERS EXTENDED.

New Regulations In Colony Force.

GAZETTE ANNOUNCEMENT.

A draft bill of an Ordinance to consolidate and amend the law relating to the establishment and regulation of the Police Force, is announced in the Government Gazette. The amended Ordinance preserves the power of arrest given to the police by Section 30A of the Summary Offences Ordinance, 1945, in the case of certain offences against sanitation.

Among the other changes in the Ordinance, is an amendment to give power to take the photograph, fingerprints, weight and measurements of every person arrested, and also of convicted persons, with a provision that all photographs etc., taken of a person not previously convicted who is acquitted, shall either be destroyed or returned to such person.

An additional offence is created of giving false evidence to the police.

Prison Silence.

Taking the view that "a modern prison cannot be run on the silent system," sections dealing with the offence of talking have been omitted in an Ordinance to consolidate and amend the law relating to Prisons.

At work, at exercise and in hospital, the prisoners talk and to prevent them communicating with each other is impossible. Talking in reason is not objected to by the Prison administration, and excessive talking can be dealt with under the rules.

The section regarding the separate confinement of prisoners, except in approved cells, has been omitted as unnecessary, as in the new prison the cells will be of uniform size, and with the exception of one or two cells in Victoria Gaol, which are larger than the average and are invariably used to accommodate three or more prisoners, the cells are all much of the same size.

A provision to section 10 of the Opium Ordinance, making it clear that the power to appoint suitable persons to sell prepared opium is to be exercised only where local circumstances make the establishment of Government opium shops difficult, is included in the Ordinance to amend the Opium Ordinance.

LANDSLIDE FATALITY.

A fall of earth occurred on the hillside at Old Kowloon-Tong yesterday, resulting in the death of a Chinese male, Cheung Sui, 35, employed as a stone breaker.

The body was removed to the Kowloon Mortuary.

Mr. J. C. Fitzhenry, Acting Superintendent of the Fire Brigade, has reported to the Police the loss of a gold wrist watch, valued at $80, from his bedroom at the Fire Station Building.

CABINET STILL CONSIDERS DISARMAMENT PLAN.

Parliament Concerned With Air Force Future.

London, To-day.
The Government's disarmament policy is still under the careful consideration of members of the Cabinet. An important debate on disarmament will take place in the House of Commons next Thursday.

Great interest is being displayed in the subject by members of Parliament and questions, particularly with regard to aerial disarmament, have been tabled for next week.—British Wireless Service.

DOLLAR FIRM WHILE SILVER GAINS GROUND

New York Stocks in Upward Flurry.

STERLING HOLDS STEADY.

The dollar remains unchanged to-day at 1/4 1-8.

Silver prices gained a fraction, spot silver rising from 18 1/2 to 18 3/16, while forward silver also gained 1/16 to 18 5/16.

The New York on London cross rates quoted yesterday at £-G$3.29 1/4 remains unchanged at that price, while the New York on London rate which was quoted yesterday at £-G$3.29 1/4, dropped a further fraction to £-G$3.29 1/4.

In New York, the Stock Market was active, with a turn-over of 1,000,000 shares, and good average gains. The action "indicated" rather strongly that the selling drive has absolutely failed to dislodge any important stock and that the technical position of the market has grown stronger during the past week, and not weaker. A further trading rally is indicated which may take a definite form after next Tuesday," says E. A. Pierce and Co.

Dow-Jones averages were: Industrials, 3.25 up; rails, 1.75 up; utilities, 1.07 up.

FAST STEAMER MAY BE ARMED BY CANTONESE

S.S. Venezia Reported Choice For Gunboat.

PURCHASE RUMOUR HEARD.

(From Our Own Correspondent).

Canton, To-day.

The former Channel steamer, s.s. Venezia, now operating on the Hong Kong-Macao run, is reported to be the object of an offer by the Canton Government and the rumour of her sale is heard in well-informed circles.

There is some doubt, however, as to who the actual purchaser of this craft may be. Some believe General Chan Chal-tong is bidding for the ship. It is believed he wishes to turn her into a river gunboat. The offered price is said to be between $300,000 and $400,000.

Negotiations are being conducted in secret, the reports state.

The rumour is lent strength by the fact that most of the Canton riverboats are disabled and the fleet is not sufficient to preserve the safety of the adjacent waters.

Yesterday, it is learned, Messrs. Chang Tin Po and So King went to Hong Kong to negotiate the purchase of naval arms and equipment.

SOUTH AMERICA REDUCES MEAT EXPORT TOTAL

Will Not Embarrass Britain In Dominions.

AN IMPORTANT TRADE.

London, To-day.
An agreement has been reached between the British Government and the great meat exporting firms in South America, under which the latter have undertaken voluntarily to reduce their exports of meat to this country on the lines suggested at the Ottawa Conference.

By the Ottawa Agreement, the British Government agreed to adopt a policy of having for its definite object the two-fold purpose of raising the price of meat to a remunerative level and of progressively increasing the share of the Dominions in the United Kingdom market. They undertook that effective steps would be taken to secure these results.

The maximum quantities of foreign meat to be allowed to be imported into the United Kingdom during each of the quarters of the period between January 1, 1933, and June 30, 1934, expressed as percentages of quantities in corresponding quarters of the twelve months ended June 30, 1932, were accordingly decided upon.

During the coming year and in the light of the experience gained, the British Government will consider the best means of ensuring an improved price situation and move orderly marketing of supplies. For this purpose a world meat conference will be held next year. It is to secure restriction to the Ottawa levels of the amount of meat imported, pending the formulation of a more permanent plan after consultation with all the interests concerned, that the agreement with the South American exporters has been reached.—British Wireless Service.

The average specie in reserve for the same month totalled $121,650,000.

Army Bares Attempt to Sell Secret Maps of Fortifications in Hawaii

Honolulu, T. H. Nov. 1.

Honolulu was filled with rumours of "spy plots" as army authorities today revealed the discovery of an alleged plan to sell valuable secret maps of the fortifications of Hawaii to foreign countries, including Britain and Japan.

Army intelligence men staged a raid last night at a bungalow in the Waikiki district, where it was reported that negotiations were under way to dispose of plans of inestimable value.

Major General Briant H. Wells issued a brief statement, but declined to give details, saying:

"Two soldiers are under arrest at Fort Shafter in connection with the removal of confidential documents from army files without the permission of army authorities."

"News of the arrests set in circulation reports that representatives of

HEIGHT RECORD.—Mlle. Maryse Hilt, the well-known French airwoman, claims to have broken the women's altitude record by flying a big monoplane to a height of 10,000 metres (approximately 32,000 feet). In all, her flight lasted an hour and 25 minutes.

EMPLOYMENT CONDITIONS IMPROVEMENT

New Figures Soon To Be Announced.

BRITAIN GRATIFIED.

London, To-day.

During the first day's debate on the unemployment problem in the House of Commons, the Minister for Labour, Sir Henry Betterton, said he believed it had been proved that the efforts of the state to stem the abnormal unemployment by expediting public works had failed, and that whatever usefulness they might have had was now exhausted.

In the year preceding September, 1931, the number of persons in employment decreased by 1,000,000. Last year, however, the number in employment was practically unchanged. There was no falling back and only in a minority of industries had the position deteriorated.

The new unemployment figures, to be published on Monday, would show an improvement. As one-third of the unemployed are engaged in industries mainly affected by world conditions, it was a matter of real satisfaction to the Government that the position had been largely maintained while conditions abroad had so seriously deteriorated. — British Wireless Service.

It is announced in the Government Gazette that Mr. J. H. B. Lee has been appointed to be an assistant to the Secretary of Chinese Affairs.

GENERAL MA'S AMAZING WAR ON JAPANESE

Personal Adventures Are Thrilling.

BOMBED IN A LAKE.

Amazing stories of the adventures of General Ma Chan-shan and his soldiers are told by Mr. Chiang Shou-shan, his representative, who has come to Peiping from Heilungkiang.

It is stated that General Ma on one occasion after the Nonni River battle hid himself in a pond overgrown with reeds while four Japanese aeroplanes bombed the stretch of water from overhead. Two bombs landed about 10 feet from where the General lay and he was injured in the face. Ma's soldiers were at first well clothed but their uniforms were soon torn in the jungles; their leather boots faded worst and had to be discarded for those made of horse skin or pig skins.

According to Mr. Chiang even the Mohammedans among General Ma's soldiers had to use foot-wear made of pig-skins in such an extremity. During the summer, the soldiers still wore winter uniforms. Later, General Ma telegraphed to the various districts still under his control, asking for new uniforms. But he only got 750 shirts, though at the time he had still 40,000 men under him.

Mr. Chiang, who recently arrived in Peiping after a long and hazardous journey from Heilungkiang, said at the outset of his talk that the activities of the Volunteers in the northeastern provinces represented a spontaneous movement on the part of the Chinese people there. Japanese publicists had been telling the world that the Volunteers operating in Manchuria were nothing but bandits, but as a matter of fact this was not true. The great majority of the Volunteers were peasants who had been compelled to take arms by the adventures of Japanese militarists. There were also disbanded soldiers, but they should not be confused with bandits, the speaker said.

Fifty Battles.

Mr. Chiang estimated that the Volunteers had fought at least 50 battles side by side with the troops of General Ma Chan-shan against the Japanese in North Manchuria. Of these the most notable were the battles of Luchuan and Pataoh, in which General Ma narrowly escaped death.

SHANGHAI SOCCER TRIAL.

As Disappointing As Hong Kong's.

POSSIBLE COMBINATION.

The first Shanghai Interport soccer trial, held on October 30, proved almost as disappointing as the recent Hong Kong match. Y. Y. Chow's team surprisingly beat S. V. Gash's XI by 5 goals to 2 before 6,000 spectators at the Canidrome.

From all indications the probable Shanghai line-up will be:—Y. Y. Chow; L. F. Stoker and Voong; Westwood, Cash and Hurry; Keats, C. Chen, Lawton, Darrle Chen and Van.

The final Hong Kong trial will be staged on Tuesday when the selectors hope to be able to fill the last eight places. Howe, Rodger and Strange having already been selected. The team will leave for Shanghai on November 22.

SANEST METHOD OF SILVER CLEANING

Chemical Process Is Most Effective.

There are two methods of cleaning silver—hand rubbing and chemical action. Chemical action is a big labour-saver, because it removes the most obstinate tarnish and leaves only a minimum of hand polishing. Cleaning by chemical action does not harm the metal, but care must be taken not to clean any "filled" or lacquered silver articles in this way. Hollow-ware is liable to be filled with a compound which, if softened by heat, will ooze out into the water, and heat will also immediately peel off the lacquer from lacquered silver.

Use a perfectly clean, grease-free, aluminium bowl or saucepan, and to each quart of boiling water add one teaspoonful of ordinary baking soda and one teaspoonful of salt. Immerse the silver in this solution, and allow it to stand until the tarnish is neutralized.

Have handy a second pan of clean, hot water, and very thoroughly rinse the silver in this. Then rub the hot metal briskly all over with a tested silverware paste polish. Rinse once more in hot water, containing a little soap, which will help to keep the silver bright much longer than if clear water were used. Dry with a soft, clean cloth, and polish with a chamois leather or a prepared cloth.

IN QUEST OF BLUE.

Dark blue and white, and lighter blues and white are in great request by fashionable women.

Their demand is met by short-sleeved dresses in blue to wear short, white coats, also brief in the arms. Perhaps the hat is as shiny and bright as the blue patent belt which fastens the frock high around the waist.

Some of the new, blue straw hats are so shiny and so tight that they give the impression of heads recently polished.

There are, also, blue shoes, blue bags, blue scarves, and even blue handkerchiefs.

SANDALS TO STAY.

Those sandals which are having such a vogue now are influencing the design of shoes for evening wear.

Already there are models showing satin tops attached to calf soles and leather heels.

The shape is an exact replica of the summer styles, being broad and comfortable, with thronging around the sides, and supported by a shapely, but medium heel. The thronging, however, is not of leather, but of bright silks. Perhaps, a material printed with several colours is used.

Black satin with black leather soles has been fascinatingly stitched with red cire silk, and this is finished with a small jewel buckle.

The Germans Still Bow To The Uniform

It ought to be able to flash a militarist but the intelligence of resplendent uniforms in public on great occasions. It ought to parade the Reichswehr up and down Unter den Linden frequently. It ought to put a much more imposing guard than the present one in front of the President's palace and the Chancellery in the Wilhelmstrasse. It ought to institute some picturesque military ceremony like the changing of the guard at Buckingham Palace or the trooping of the colours by the Horse Guards in Whitehall or the annual July 14 march down the Champs Elysees. It ought to have a whole repertoire of fanfares and drills and parades with which to regale Berlin and the greater provincial centres. It ought constantly to dangle, neat uniforms, steel helmets and muskets before the public in colourful variations.

Behind the militaristic facade a statesman who could think in terms broader than those of military science and utilise methods more subtle than those of martial law might lay the foundation for a republic which would endure when the uniform had ceased to be a fetish and had taken its proper place in the life of a politically enlightened community. He might gradually teach the Germans to operate a parliamentary system so that eventually they could do it even without dressing up in uniforms. He might slowly convince them that politics and the army could really be two separate and almost completely unrelated things; that the army might conceivably be subordinate to the civilian power in fact as well as in theory.

But the statesmen who would undertake this task would have to wear a uniform. With shoulder straps of high rank. He would have to be able to take a salute in the approved manner and stiffen up in public just as though he had none but purely military aspirations. He ought to be able to look like von Seeckt or Ludendorff and be more like Dr. Brüning. He ought to have a Hindenburg presence and a Brüning mind. He should combine the Prussian military bearing with the liberal outlook of the Rhineland. He should have the air of

There are several stray and eccentric German Generals who somehow happened to turn republican. They are regarded by their more normal fellows as strange specimens of mental aberration. None seems likely to develop into a statesman as well as a republican. They might help to maintain the military facade, but they would not be capable of doing the organising and educational work behind that facade which would be necessary to make parliamentarism a success. The military power is too strong, and the republicans—who are not lacking in numbers or ardour—have not the leaders they need to win. So one may say, paraphrasing Shaw's paraphrase of Plato, that either the military men must become republicans or the republicans must become military men if Germany is to construct a lasting republic.

THE END.

"I will take Sanatogen till my nerves are better"

THOUSANDS of people—as sceptical as you—have discovered that their decision: "I will give Sanatogen a fair trial," has changed their whole life.

Where formerly they felt worn and tired, they now enjoy radiant health and abundant energy. They are really and thoroughly healthy again, able to do a full day's work without feeling any fatigue.

Sanatogen revitalizes the whole cell life of your system and multiplies the number of red blood corpuscles. But its main strength lies in its remarkable influence on the nervous system. That is principally due to the glycerophosphate which is present in Sanatogen in the exact form in which it exists in the nerve cells. It is only from Sanatogen—an intricate chemical combination unique in the whole scientific world—that these delicate nerve-cells can fully absorb the energising phosphates.

That's why the famous standard work: "The Elements of Pharmacy, Materia Medica and Therapeutics" says: "In neurasthenia and neuralgic conditions, Sanatogen is clearly indicated"

PRES. HOOVER'S FATEFUL SPEECH.

Prepared in Lincoln's
White House Study.

New York.

President Hoover's prospects in the Presidential election in the United States are giving his Republican supporters considerable worry.

The Republicans, led by Mr. Hoover personally, are moving with desperate determination into the final phase of the election campaign.

Some of the President's most trusted advisers have told him that there is serious danger of his failing to be re-elected. This menace caused Mr. Hoover to abandon his usual week-end rest in the country, and stay at the White House to work on his fighting speech.

President Hoover is writing his "Key-note" speech, on which so much depends, in the study at the White House which was used by Abraham Lincoln. In this room on the second floor of the White House Mr. Hoover is seeking inspiration from the memories of the Republican Party's greatest leader. He said to a friend:

"Even men of small stature have been lifted above themselves in the atmosphere of this room."

That President Hoover has reason for worry is admitted by the most astute political observers of both sides at Washington. Republicans, as well as Democrats, admit that the country's trend is distinctly towards the Democratic Party.

This belief is verified by the unofficial poll taken before all American elections by the magazine "Literary Digest." The magazine sends out millions of its voting cards to people throughout the United States, and results before previous elections have proved remarkably accurate.

Wall Street believe in Mr. Roosevelt's chances, the betting on the result of the election being five to four in favour of the Democratic candidate.

MUSSOLINI AN ERRAND BOY.

Young Socialist Expelled
From Switzerland.

The far-off days, when Signor Mussolini was a young man of 25, earning 29s. a month as assistant to an Italian grocer and pork butcher in Lausanne, and when he was considered an advanced Socialist, are recalled in an interesting interview, published in "Le Journal."

In 1905, Mussolini, who had been expelled from various cantons in Switzerland, arrived at Lausanne, and went to see Signor Charles de Paulis for a job. He was engaged as general help and errand boy. He had been recommended to his employer by a friend who attended the same Socialist meetings, and said he was honest and hard-working.

"I offered him 25s. a month and his board," said Signor de Paulis, "and he jumped at the offer, for he was nearly destitute. I knew that his political opinions were far in advance of mine, but we kept off the subject. I always found him very likeable, but not especially assiduous on his job. Whenever he had to go out on an errand, he always took a book with him, and I felt he only thought of his studies at the university. He then wrote striking articles in an Italian newspaper published in Switzerland," said Signor de Paulis, "and was noticed by many of his professors. He already had most masterful and piercing eyes, which so distinguish him to-day."

Mussolini remained with his employer for a year, and then was sent away as business was bad. He found further employment in a short while, but then he was definitely expelled from Switzerland. The curious part of it is that when he attended the Lausanne Conference, that order of expulsion was still in force. "Since then," added Signor de Paulis, "I have not spoken to him. I am neither Fascist nor anti-Fascist, and I have no favour to ask. I am quite content with my lot and he has done very well for himself."

MAIL REVIEW

"NEW MORALS FOR OLD"—QUEEN'S THEATRE.

"New Morals For Old," an M.G.M. production adapted from John van Druyten's stage play, is playing to a well filled house at the Queen's Theatre.

Robert Young, who is cast as the son and whose ambition it is to become a painter, is well portrayed, Margaret Perry, who takes the part of the daughter, is inclined to over-act the part.

Lewis Stone, although wrongly cast, gives an excellent interpretation of the rigid father with a kindly heart. He shares acting honours with Laura Hope Crews who is excellent as the mother. David Newell, Jean Hersholt, Mitchell Lewis and Elizabeth Patterson all fill minor roles.

A comedy and Hearst's Newsreel complete a good programme.

MAIL REVIEW

"AMATEUR DADDY"—KING'S THEATRE.

Warner Baxter, whose memorable performance with Janet Gaynor in "Daddy Long Legs" is still fresh in one's mind, assumes a fatherly role in Fox's production "Amateur Daddy," the current attraction at the King's Theatre.

Baxter is cast as a young hard-working American construction engineer—the typical kind-hearted bachelor so characteristic of everyday life. He falls in love with Marion Nixon, who did good work in "After Tomorrow," and becomes an "amateur daddy." The director, John Blystone, has treated the film with the right touch that gives it a very human appeal.

The film is taken from Mildred Cram's novel "Scotch Valley," and the cast also includes Rita LaRoy and William Pawley. Recommended!

MAIL REVIEW

"THE LOST SQUADRON"—CENTRAL THEATRE.

The self-sacrificing brotherhood of men, air, thrills galore, and a glorious romance are combined in the RKO-Radio Pictures "The Lost Squadron" now showing at the Central Theatre.

Richard Dix and a remarkable supporting cast appear in this dramatic air-thriller which is about the making of aviation movies in Hollywood.

Based on the stirring adventures of the film stunt aviators—men who risk their lives for the sake of injecting thrills in pictures—the film tells the story of these nerveless fliers and supply thrills in plenty.

Robert Armstrong, Joel McCrea, Mary Astor, Dorothy Jordan and Ralph Ince appear in the supporting cast.

MAIL REVIEW

"UP FOR MURDER"—MAJESTIC THEATRE.

Lew Ayres, who did brilliant work in "All Quiet . . ." has the leading role as a cub reporter in "Up For Murder" now showing at the Majestic Theatre.

The story is a succession of dramatic situations brought about by the existence of "the eternal triangle" in which the cub reporter and the society editor are unmarried and the publisher is not. Genevieve Tobin and Richard Tucker also do good work. Monta Bell directed the film.

"POSSESSED"—STAR THEATRE.

Joan Crawford and Clark Gable are cast in the leading roles in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's picture "Possessed" now playing at the Star Theatre. It is the story of a country maid who goes to New York to better her position. She is lured by a rising politician (Gable) with whom she is intimate for three years. He loves her but does not propose marriage until the eve of the election for governorship. He slaps her face and sends her out.

Joan Crawford acts with much emotion throughout. Recommended!

"TWO ORPHANS"—ORIENTAL THEATRE.

The first Cantonese talking film "Two Orphans" is now showing at the Oriental Theatre. Wu San is cast in the leading role, and the production was produced by the United Motion Picture Industrial Ltd.

OFFICIAL SOURCES.

"CARNIVAL"—AT THE CENTRAL.

A film of beauty, movement and power, aptly describes "Carnival" the British super-production coming to the Central Theatre on Sunday next. Most of the scenes are set to music—music not deliberate, but a subtle accompaniment to the action of the film. The acting is superb: Matheson Lang. Dorothy Bouchier and Joseph Schildkraut all give of their best. Matheson Lang needs no eulogy, his powerful acting is too well known, neither does Joseph Schildkraut, whose "romantic lover" roles have endeared him in many feminine hearts, but special mention must be made of Dorothy Bouchier, who looks amazingly lovely in this film. Her acting, poise and appearance have improved beyond belief. The change from "Chili" to Dorothy has certainly given us a "warmer" and more lovable little actress!

OFFICIAL SOURCES.

"CHARLIE CHAN'S CHANCE"—KING'S THEATRE.

Among the proud possessions of Warner Oland, famed for his portrayal of Oriental roles on both stage and screen, is a silk embroidered Chinese mandarin coat that was presented to him by a wealthy admirer in China.

It was given to Oland for his "consistent and dignified portrayal of the Chinese on the screen." Oland's latest Oriental role is that of Charlie Chan, the famous Chinese detective from Honolulu, in "Charlie Chan's Chance," coming on Sunday next to the King's Theatre.

New Zealand.

Recently New Zealand celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of her recognition as a dominion, and this was the occasion for some quite legitimate self-congratulation. New Zealand had not escaped the blasts of the chill wind of adversity which has swept the world. Nevertheless, since she graduated into the more dignified rank her progress has been remarkable. Before 1907 the term "dominion," applied to members of the Empire, had rather a nebulous meaning. It was a sort of courtesy title bestowed upon groups of colonies which had joined in bonds of closer association. Of course, New Zealand antedates Australia as a federation, and, anticipating what may be the eventual fate of the Commonwealth, had become a unitary State in 1876. But her admission to the ranks of dominionhood gave that word a changed significance, connoting an established degree of maturity, self-sufficiency, and importance. Since then the idea of dominion status has been amplified and defined, and its implications have been endlessly discussed. But, despite all the academic resolutions about the complete "equality" of the dominions and the mother country, as long as the former depend upon the protection of the British Navy, the theoretical equality is in practice a polite fiction. This is a truth which New Zealand has ever borne in mind.

Australians are prone to assert a pre-emptive right to Captain Cook's most notable discoveries, but New Zealand's claims are quite as strong. Tasman was the first European to make a land-fall there. But Cook carried out a much more thorough investigation, and left enduring memorials in place names which survive to tell the story of his voyage, his experiences thereon, and his adherence to naval traditions. There are Cape Kidnappers, Cape Foulwind, Cape Turnagain, and Cape Farewell. At Poverty Bay he found the natives inhospitable—no doubt, in this region an instinctively generous people was suffering hard times in the matter of food, and had none to spare—but in the Bay of Plenty he received better treatment. Queen Charlotte's Sound recalls his loyalty to the British Crown, and Hawke Bay—the original nomenclature—the admiral who, a few years previously, had defeated the French at Quiberon in a war in which Cook had himself served. Cook annexed the Northern Island by carving—like Orlando—his sovereign's name on the trunk of a tree, and wrote in his journal an entry recommending the Thames Valley as the best site for a colony, "if the settling of this country should ever be thought worthy of the attention of Great Britain." He then set sail for Australia. Cook's estimate of the possibilities of the shores of Botany Bay for pastoral and agricultural pursuits was over-sanguine. But he was not far wrong in regard to the Thames Valley, which proved rich in gold.

Architects & Sunshine

A place in the sun is now almost every one's ambition, whether in a house or an office or a hotel. It was not always so; the attractive word "sun-trap" in the builders' sense is quite new; and buildings of no great age stand on all sides to prove that light and air used not to be such considerations as they are now. Hence a new demand upon architecture, the extent of which can be judged from the report in the current Journal of the Royal Institute of British Architects. It is plain that architects and builders have before them no single problem, but many, according to a building's purpose, size, and site. If the site is a wide open space, over which nothing casts a shadow, an architect has a free hand; and the building built has every chance of being as airy and light as possible. It is otherwise in streets, where, do what one will, the site is pre-ordained, and where the aspect on one side is bound to be exactly the reverse of that on the other. There is also the question of good neighbourliness, a cause surely worth serving, for too often in practice, if not in law, there are no "common liberties" of light and air, and there have been notable additions to urban architecture of late which must be anything but welcome to their near neighbours. Nevertheless, new experiments are due. Past building has not always been an answer to natural requirements; the classical style, for instance, with its comparatively small, but often beautiful pillars and porticoes, derives from a latitude where the sun can be too oppressive. The older English houses, again, were all too apt to neglect certain parts now regarded as vitally important to health. Even the vast modern blocks of business premises and flats, so palatial in exterior, are often not without their sombre side; there may be dismal wells in the heart of luxury. It is to be feared also that much architecture is but an expression of what Robert Bridges called "Self-hood," to a consideration of which in plant life he invites his readers. Plant

Typewriter Tests.

Is the pen, like the horse, doomed to extinction? In the United States the use of pens has been dealt a heavy blow by an experiment in juvenile typewriting conducted by two American professors.

Typewriters were used in 27 schools over a period of two years. The progress of the children was compared with that of children in similar but typewriterless schools. In every respect, the professors report, the typewriting children had the advantage. Their educational advance was roughly 7 per cent. over that of the pen-pushing children. Particularly marked was the progress in original composition. It is claimed that children find it easier to think when writing on a machine, and that spelling and reading also benefit greatly.

America's Battle At The Polls

Prohibition A Big Election Issue

EXPENSIVE GOVERNMENT

Every four years America, from coast to coast, is turned topsyturvy by the Presidential election. Of all political hulla-baloos, this quadrennial upheaval is the greatest.

During twenty-eight years' residence in New York I have been an eyewitness and student of seven Presidential elections, writes Percy S. Bullen, "Daily Telegraph" New York Correspondent.

All of them have had much the same human and spectacular interest, but the big fight now being staged is of far greater importance nationally and internationally.

Those elections of the past, not forgetting 1904, when Theodore Roosevelt, of "the big stick," was the dominant figure, were as April showers compared with the tornado which will sweep the country next November, mild cases of measles compared with an epileptic fit!

In the last three years the economic system of the United States has been strained at times to the point of partial collapse. Mr. Hoover has told us that the major financial crisis is over and the course set for recovery. There is good reason for that belief.

On the other hand, both Mr. Hoover, the Republican, and Governor Franklin Roosevelt, the Democratic candidate, are agreed that the rents in the capitalistic system, as disclosed in the hour of trial, are obvious and must be repaired.

There are differences of opinion regarding the remedy, but no differences as to the urgent necessity. Both candidates and the leading statesmen of the country tell us the "economic system" of America is the vital issue upon which the elections should turn.

Enormous Costs.

The cost of the Federal Government has risen from $220,000,000 in 1914 to close upon $1,000,000,000 in 1931. In that period the population of the United States has increased 27 per cent. and the Budget of the country 338 per cent.

State and city governments have followed Washington's example, all inspired by the fallacious doctrines of 1920—"the new era"—"the problem of poverty solved"—"the two-car garage for every household"—the doctrinaire slogans now resting on the waste heap.

New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, and other great cities today are on the verge of bankruptcy.

They, like the Washington Government, must economise drastically on the task, not yet accomplished, of balancing budgets, or the position will become impossible.

Mr. Bernard Baruch, a great American authority held in the highest regard by Mr. Winston Churchill, estimated recently that the total cost to the nation of civil control, Federal, State and local, this year will reach $3,000,000,000. This amount must be taken from a probable income of $9,000,000,000. The task is to reduce budgets and increase taxation.

In the case of the Federal Budget Mr. Baruch says a reduction of at least $200,000,000 is the prime essential to general business recovery. All that has been done to date in the way of balancing national State and city budgets is described by the experts as "more patchwork."

"Wet" or "Dry"?

Despite the foregoing, the battle of the polls in November will not be decided by such issues as sound economy and balanced budget. No; the American voter leaves these things to the leaders and platform-makers, and, possessing for the most part a one-track mind, he battles chiefly for the "wets" or "drys."

The late President Wilson won an election on the issue, "He kept us out of war!" This election will go to the side which can convince a thrifty public of its willingness and ability to "bring back beer."

In the middle of an acute depression, with millions of unemployed, much suffering, and a hard winter ahead, beer, not economy and reform is the deciding factor!

There is to-day tremendous unrest and bewilderment throughout the country. Agriculture is in a deplorable state, and several millions have gone "on strike" for better prices. To secure order in the mining districts troops have been mobilised, and in Washington cavalry and police with tear bombs were employed to disperse the Bonus Marchers.

Europeans might expect that the facts enumerated would favour the rise of an American Mussolini or a Pilsudski. They would be mistaken. There has been a marked trend of late in the way of tolerating Socialist propaganda, but no demand for a Socialist Government.

Labour "Sold Out."

With faith in Republicans and Democrats undermined, but not destroyed, the election machines of these two great organisations remain almost as strongly entrenched as ever. In New York the train-flocks of Tammany will march as usual like sheep to the polling offices. The Labour party will literally sell its support to the highest bidder, either Republican or Democrat.

To form a Labour party on British lines is a topic often discussed here. The proposal has been rejected because the leaders who boss the rank and file can extract legislative toll, likewise personal emolument for their friends, from either existing parties.

The bitterest cry one hears today in the big cities of America is the cry that the "workers" have been sold out by their leaders. This dissatisfaction, now nationwide, may furnish the basis for a New Labour party in the future—but not now.

In America, where many parties have been shattered in the last few years, and many beliefs weakened, there still remains a strong national will to find the path to safety.

Despite recent shocks, the vast majority of the people still believe that their form of government is the best, and that the conditions of the masses are better here than elsewhere. The standard of living in normal times has been the highest in the world for the middle-classes and the "workers."

This rosy picture is admittedly marred by the national uprising against Prohibition and the manifest evils which have followed.

For this reason it is predicted very confidently that the majority of the 38,000,000 who will vote in November—5,000,000 for the first time—will cast their ballot, not so much for sound finance and balanced budgets, but according to the "alcoholic content" of the local candidate. The great battle is admittedly "Wets" versus "Drys."

The Unknown Factor.

Both sides are angling for support with profuse promises of beer and wine before Christmas—a most enticing prospect. The Democratic platform is described as "dripping wet."

The Republicans are merely damp by comparison, but they have worded their plan in such a way as to conciliate the "Wets" without alienating the "Drys," who are still very powerful in many States. Polling alone can demonstrate which side is offering the most acceptable panacea.

The unknown factor in this momentous election is the Socialist party, headed by a man admittedly honest, fearless, able, and educated—Mr. Norman Thomas.

A graduate of Princeton University, Mr. Thomas was ordained a minister of the Presbyterian Church in 1911, and to-day he is a busy New York Journalist.

Many of the people who formerly voted Republican or Democratic are pledging themselves to support Thomas, by way of protest against the growing inefficiency, ineptitude, and corruption of the existing party machines.

Germany Still Bows To Uniforms

Militarist And Mystic Appeal Of Nazis

NATION FOLLOWS THE DRUMS

Berlin. The strongest political group in Germany, that of the Nazis, is more like an army than a political party. It expresses its emotions and aspirations principally by drilling and marching and demonstrating. Even its leaders' orations and the pamphlets issued by its intellectual general staff have a military savour. Its meetings are military ceremonies. Its cohesion is symbolised by a headdress and a salute. Its fervour takes the form of a military rite. Its most active members are known as "storm troops." Its manifestoes read like ultimata hurled by one army commander at another.

Its loudly proclaimed aims take the form not so much of political programmes as exhortations to battle. Hitler has talked for years about the necessary "conquest of the streets." The Nazis may fairly be described as an enormous and passionately earnest life and drum corps following a mystical swastika flag toward goals that have been only vaguely defined. They are swept onward by the strains of military music and the ardour of a curious political-mystical mysticism very difficult for peoples of other lands to understand.

But the Germans, while they may not understand them, adore these things. The Germans are, on the whole, nothing if not military and nothing if not mystical. It was significant and characteristic that the political crisis arose over a question of uniforms (brueening having forbidden the wearing of the Nazi uniform in public). To the German mind there is something odd and inexplicably venerable about a uniform. The uniform is almost a fetish. It seems to clothe its wearer in some sort of aura of loyalty and public service and valour and disinterestedness.

The Prussian soldier traditionally typified unselfish devotion to the community. To don a uniform was somewhat like putting on a priest's robe; it signified the abandonment of a quest of riches or personal ambition in favour of unquestioning obedience to a higher power, the State. The State itself was a mystical conception, and the uniform was a symbol of service. The Prussian guardsman of the time of Frederick the Great lived a life that was almost monkish in its abstinence and its immolation of personal interests.

This traditional feeling about the uniform could not be eradicated by the Treaty of Versailles, though that treaty did reduce Germany's army to 100,000 professional troops. As the French have often complained, the military spirit remained. The uniform, restricted by the treaty, sprang up all the more persistently outside the official army. Veterans' organisations wore it, and put it on many youths who were not war veterans but joined these societies nevertheless.

The Hitler Fascist movement organised an army of some 200,000 of more of its own, with uniforms and trucks and hospital corps and all. Then the defenders of the republic formed a military corps, likewise uniformed. If you visit the headquarters of the Stahlhelm in Berlin, you will find an erect, uniformed, saluting soldier at the door, though he has no official standing whatever. If you call upon Hitler at the Nazi staff headquarters in Munich, you will see a whole squad of heel-clicking, uniformed youths guarding all the entrances.

Perhaps there is even an added interest in uniform as a result of the limitations imposed by foreign powers upon Germany's army and the abolition of conscription. Perhaps the youth of the country are more attracted by uniforms, than they would be if they had to spend three years in barracks, as formerly.

Perhaps, as a consequence of the treaty, the army, the military life and the Generals who represent it, have acquired something of the attraction of forbidden fruit. In any case, the politics of Germany are peculiarly military. The army is inextricably, if sometimes only indirectly, mixed up in politics. Generals enjoy a prestige in public life that few civilians have attained. No German to-day can think of politics without thinking of Generals and uniforms and the attitude of the Reichswehr. A war record is essential to a political career. In England the Prime Minister is a man who, as an uncompromising pacifist, opposed the war throughout and never took any part in it. In Germany, such a man could hardly hope to enter the Reichstag, to say nothing of leading the nation.

Discussing possible Presidential candidates last Spring, an eminent German named several Generals.

"But must you have a General for President?" he was asked.

"Yes, indeed," he replied, smiling. "We must have a General, preferably a very old one."

"Everything we Germans do tends to take a military form," said a Nazi leader. "The monarchy was military, the republic is military, and our political parties are military."

Von Hindenburg was elected President largely because he had been a distinguished soldier and in spite of his complete absence of political experience. If Dr. Bruening had only worn a uniform and put some nationalistic fervour into his usually coolly intellectual speeches he might be Chancellor of Germany to-day. If the republic is to be saved in Germany—unless it is already too late—it seems likely that it will have to be saved by somebody who wears a uniform and can put up at least a military appearance. He need not be militaristic, but only military.

The problem, then, is to find a military man (preferably a General) who is a republican at heart and who believes that liberal institutions are possible in Germany, in spite of her long adherence to feudalism, monarchism and militarism; a General with political talents and statesmanlike abilities. Such Generals would not be hard to find in France or England, but they are rarer in Germany.

Germans like a strong government that can speak in commanding tones and be obeyed. They might not object if their government were moderately liberal in its aims, provided it had a military air about it and talked in nationalistic accents. Consequently, the transition to democracy (if it is possible), might best be made by means of a government that had all the medieval trappings and an emphatically military bearing, but really was devoted to a liberal, parliamentary regime.

THE MOTOR TAX.

[To the Editor, "China Mail."]

Sir, I have bought a used "Fiat" car in Singapore and brought it up to Hong Kong.

According to the Empire Preference Ordinance issued on October 13, this year, a tax of 20% has been imposed on "Motor Vehicles" which are not manufactured within the British Empire.

The motor car in question, unfortunately, came to Hong Kong after this ordinance, and I will put the following question forward. Will it be necessary for me to pay this tax, in this instance, when the car was registered in another part of the British Empire for years and then brought to Hong Kong.

Yours truly,

M. B.

We are informed by the Police Traffic Inspector, that any car that is not manufactured in the British Empire, is taxable to 20 per cent of its value when first registered in the Colony. The fact that the car has been registered in other parts of the British Empire does not exempt it from the tax in Hong Kong.—Ed. "China Mail."

SCOTTISH COMPANY HOLDS REUNION.

Pipers March With Steaming Feast.

CAPT. FORSYTH'S REVIEW.

Scott and Sassenach alike gathered at the Hong Kong Volunteer Defence Corps Headquarters to celebrate the Scottish Company's eighth Hallowe'en Reunion Dinner last night. Ushered in to the swirling music of the pipes, the haggis, brown and steaming, was the motif of the evening. The passing round of the official table of the bowl with a "wee sma' drappie" was also carried out with due ceremony.

Present at the official table were:—Capt. H. R. Forsyth, O.C. the Scottish Company, Mr. K. E. Greig, President of the St. Andrews' Society, Lt.-Col. L. G. Bird, O.B.E., D.S.O., O.C. the H.K.V.D.C., Major H. B. L. Dowbiggin, Mr. J. B. Ross, Rev. E. G. Powell, Mr. W. Logan, Mr. K. S. Morrison, Capt. Genter, Adjutant of the H.K.V.D.C., Mr. W. Kay, Capt. Johnson, Mr. W. L. Shields, Lt. Stewart, and Capt. R. R. Davies.

Nearly 100 other members of the Scottish Coy., and guests were present.

Capt. Forsyth proposed the loyal toast, and after the singing of "Scots Wha Hae," Capt. Forsyth again rose to propose "The Visitors," Mr. K. E. Greig replying.

Pipe selections were given by pipers under Pipe Major Mackie, while songs were sung by the Company and the Sawdust Club Trio. Second Lt. T. P. Sanderson delighted with a sword dance.

COMPANY'S ACTIVITIES.

In proposing "The Visitors" Capt. Forsyth gave a brief resume of the Company's activities throughout the year. Since coming back from leave last September, he had found a very virile Company and he complimented Lieut. Brown on his work. In the rifle meets the speaker continued the Company had acquitted themselves well, and special mention should be made of the performance of the No. 7 Platoon "B" team at the Easter meeting, when they retained the tile rifle shooting trophy. The "A" team had also done exceedingly well.

The Company had held a dance during the year, but he was sorry to say that it was not a financial success.

In September the Scottish Company had fired in an Interport shoot. A team from Singapore which should have competed was unfortunately unable to compete, but Shanghai took part. Hong Kong shot on September 25, and Shanghai the next. The Hong Kong Scottish Company did not shoot up to their usual standard, and Shanghai won by a very narrow margin.

Dealing with the strength of the Company, the speaker said that there were 54 members on October 31. The numbers had maintained a steady average during the past few years. Training was now in progress, and he was glad to see that with their usual adaptability the Company overcame the Machine Gun training work. In this regard he congratulated the N.C.O. on their attendance at the classes on

by Frank Watts.

THE return to consciousness after strangulation is an exquisite torture. Graham King, opening his eyes, almost wished they had been closed for ever. His bruised and swollen throat seemed lined with acidblistered parchment, and the surging throb of his brain made living an agony. Pain clouded his brain like a fog as he closed his eyes to collect his senses and to shut out the sight of the huge form bending over him.

When Ali, his partner's gun-bearer, had returned to the camp at Kiswani and reported that Scott had been carried off by some human monster, who left a spoor fully two feet in length King thought he was lying, and told him so. Ali, however, was insistent, and promised to lead him to the spot where he could see the footprint for himself. For three days they had followed a game-path through the dense African bush and had camped, as Ali asserted, a day's march from the site of Scott's camp. After seeing the sentries posted King turned in. Normally, he would have been asleep almost at once, but the anxiety he felt over the disappearance of Scott and a sense of danger which he could not describe even to himself kept him awake. After twisting and turning under the stifling heat of the mosquito net he got up, took his rifle, and made his way to the water-hole in the hope of getting a buck.

The Bush, with its thousand sounds at night, was as familiar to him as is the noise of a ship's engines to an engineer. The rustle of the dead grass, a bird whose three monotonous notes sounded like a telegraphist calling a distant station, and the tropical moonlight shining through leafless trees, made the path look like a strip of fretwork set on a bed of grey velvet.

Although he heard nothing unusual, he suddenly swung round with the natural fighter's instinct which gives warning of an attack directed against an unguarded back. But, quickly as he turned, he was a fraction of a second too late. A towering black bulk knocked aside his rifle and seized him by the throat, choking back his cry into a stifled grunt. King was no weakling, but he was as helpless as an antelope in the grip of a lion against this crushing pressure that threatened to smash in his ribs and close his throat. Bright lights flashing before his bulging eyes, followed by a sucking blackness, were the last things he remembered until he slowly returned to the agony of consciousness.

He forced himself to peep under half-closed eyes and study his captors. Ali had not lied; they were giant and gianness. At a rough estimate King decided that the man was well over seven feet in height, and the woman little less. Seeing the flicker of his eyes, the man brought him water in a calabash and held it to his lips. King then found that his wrists and ankles were tied tightly with green bark. When he had emptied the vessel the main retained to the task he had evidently been engaged upon while King was unconscious. He noticed with surprise that they were making a litter of the same material as that with which he was bound. The crystal moonlight made the scene as clear as day, and lit up the fine brow, good nose, broad shoulders and narrow hips which were common to both the natives and proclaimed them to be of a race more ancient and kindly even than the Massai, who are said to be descended from the Lost Tribes. Probably, King thought, they were Watutsi—a tribe from the treeless region around Lake Kiwa—but why they were so far south was too conscious of his peril to surmise.

Watching them, his eyes fell on the man's feet, and like a flash he realised that he was in the hands of Scott's captors. One foot was small, but the other was afflicted with elephantiasis and was a shapeless lump of flesh at least two feet in length.

As he studied them, they tied the two ends of the bark netting to a pole, and, placing the hammock thus formed on the ground, rolled him in. Then, each taking an end, they raised it to their shoulders and broke into a jog trot.

King suffered fresh agony when the green bark hardened and cut into his flesh with the thudding motion whenever his captors walked in step. Again and again he yelled to them to break step in order to ease his lacerated back.

For three days he endured the pain. Twice he tried to escape, but after the second attempt they tied the top of the litter. All his efforts to engage them in conversation proved abortive, for while understanding him, as their actions proved, they made no answers to any of his questions. But when a halt was made at mid-day on the fourth day the giant addressed him in halting Swahili.

"Buana," he began, "at sunset

MONDAY'S STORY.

Monday's short story will be "The Dream of Ah Lum," by Thomas Burke.

we reach our journey's end, and it is well that you eat, for M'ti, the God of Trees, despises a hungry offering, and, moreover, is displeased with me, as the last offering was dead before the Mighty One's lusty sons could eat his strength."

King, who had by this time no doubt that the previous sacrifice was Scott, asked: "What harm had the Buana done that he should be sacrificed to your god?"

"None Buana, but for many moons M'ti had demanded an offering worthy of his greatness. When the god demands, who am I to refuse his commands?"

"In what manner did the Buana die?" King ventured.

"Buana, in my eagerness I broke his neck."

King almost envied Scott; his end, at least, had been instantaneous. To his further questions he learnt that the native's name was Funga-Kamba, and that he was waiting until the Tree God indicated that the time was propitious for the sacrifice. The result of this conversation was to confirm King's suspicions that he was in the hands of a religious fanatic who, in all probability, had been cast out from his tribe on account of elephantiasis. For himself he could see no hope of rescue. The second disappearance—practically on the site of Scott's—would refuse to search for him, even if they were able to follow the spoor.

By this time the gloom of the bamboo forest through which they had been passing assumed a sinister air. To his active imagination the whispering and clicking of the tall canes sounded like the Tree God licking his lips in anticipation. When at night Funga-Kamba crawled into the grass shelter that the woman had made, his worst fears were confirmed.

"Buana," he announced, "M'ti has spoken to me, his priest, and his words were thus: 'The White Man is worthy to be sacrificed to me at daybreak—the offering is to be made by the growing shoots.'"

"The growing shoots."

"GLOBE OF DEATH" THRILLS.

Carnival Entertainment For Kowloon.

A newcomer in the local entertainment world, is Tate's Manila Carnival Show, which makes its first appearance in Kowloon on November 10 on the vacant ground in front of the Peninsula Hotel.

The Carnival provides something new in entertainment in the form of the "Globe of Death," a latticed work globe, round the inside of which a rider performs amazing evolutions.

Another of the very popular attractions will be the "Dodgem" cars which are self operated and provide great amusement. Other side shows are the Big Wheel, the Merry-Go-Round—a treat for the kiddies, the Hawaiian Hula Hula Dancers who never fail to draw a crowd, a Flea circus which does everything but bite and the Motor Drome which consists of a series of hair-raising motor cycle stunts.

The Carnival will be here on a very short stay as they are to fulfil engagements down South.

A reception will be held Sunday, at 11 a.m. in the Club de Recreio, Kowloon, to present an address to the Very Rev. Father G. M. Spada, in commemoration of the 40th anniversary of his arrival in Hong Kong. All friends of Father Spada are cordially invited to attend.

News In Brief.

The economic possibilities of the heavy oil engine were stressed by Mr. F. Edwards, A.M.I. Mech. E. during a lecture on Thursday afternoon to members of the Institution of Engineers and Shipbuilders.

Colonel Morrow is the son of the original founder of the Hong Kong Daily Press, Mr. J. Y. Morrow, who was connected with the Colony in the very early days of its history.

The speaker, concluding, thanked the guests for their attendance.

MR. GREIG REPLIES. Mr. Greig, responding for the visitors, lauded the H.K.V.D.C. as a medium for bringing together the Scots who resided in the Colony. He said he would like to make particular reference to the shooting competitions. Such competitions were very desirable. The Scots, particularly the older ones, looked to the Volunteers to bring Scots to the fore, and it gave them very great pleasure to see them doing so well.

The speaker then called on the visitors to rise and toast their guests.

A WHOLE WEEK'S NEWSPAPERS IN ONE.

The thrilling tale of the rescue of 31 Japanese seamen from the battered hulk of the fishing trawler Shea Shan Maru 150 miles from Pratas Shoal, was related by officers of the British steamship Glenshield, Capt. R. L. Sanders commanding, which arrived in Hong Kong at 9 p.m. on October 31, more than 24 hours overdue.

The Japanese craft, sighted in a sinking condition, had lost her mast and rudder, was out of fuel and stores, and her crew were almost exhausted by their ceaseless battle with the sea, which had lasted for three days.

A full report is given in the OVERLAND CHINA MAIL.

Before the Hong Kong Divorce Bill was given second reading at the session of the Legislative Council on October 27, Hon. Mr. J. P. Braga, declaring that he represented a large proportion of the residents of the Colony, launched an attack upon the measure from moral and practical angles.

Hon. Mr. J. J. Patterson, replying to Mr. Braga's criticism, said that so far as he could understand, the Divorce Bill did no more than transplant the English procedure to Hong Kong.

The Attorney-General, briefly explained the Bill. The Government, he said, was not concerned with the religious aspects of the case. The Hong Kong Bill followed the procedure adopted in the Federal Malay States, but did not go so far.

The Bill, he added, would not come into force until His Majesty's pleasure is known.

The meeting is reported in the OVERLAND CHINA MAIL.

A wedding of great social interest to the Colony, was solemnised in St. John's Cathedral on October 31, when Miss Enid Ida Elliot-Heywood, only daughter of Captain C. E. Elliot-Heywood, R.A.P.C., and Mrs. Elliot-Heywood, of Kowloon, became the bride of Captain Francis William Webb, Royal Artillery, only son of Lieut.-Col. and Mrs. A. H. Webb, of Sevenoaks, Kent, and A.D.C. to His Excellency the Officer Administering the Government (the Hon. Mr. W. T. Southern, C.M.G.). The ceremony was performed by the Very Rev. A. Swann, M.A., D.S.C., Dean of Hong Kong, assisted by the Rev. Walton Rogers, M.A., Vicar of St. Andrew's Church, Kowloon.

The wedding is fully reported in the OVERLAND CHINA MAIL.

There is no phase of the life of the Colony or of China that does not receive attention in the OVERLAND CHINA MAIL—the weekly paper that YOU MUST ORDER NOW.

ST. ANDREW'S LOSE ON MARINA.

Weak Side Beaten By 5th H.K.S.R.A.

Fielding only nine of their regular players, and having the assistance of G. Lee, and an Indian deputy, the St. Andrew's Club were defeated by the 5th Battery H. K. Singapore Brigade R.A. by 2 goals to nil on the Marina ground yesterday afternoon.

Though enjoying most of the exchanges, the Saints forward line sorely lacked combination, but they were well-served in defence.

A notable absentee from the Saints eleven was A. B. Hanson, whose place at centre-half was filled by F. V. Wong, who unusually plays left full back. S. MacNider took the latter position.

The Indians secured their points through their centre-forward, who scored once in each period of the game.

St. Andrew's Club—R. H. Wong; E. H. P. White, S. MacNider; G. T. Lee, F. V. Wong, Indian; F. A. Broadbridge, A. E. P. Guest; E. F. Fincher, E. MacNider, R. A. Carroll.

MAMAK SHIELD.

First Drawn Game In Tourney.

The 1st Hong Kong Singapore Brigade R.A., who have secured five victories without a defeat in the Mamak Tournament this season, suffered a reverse yesterday afternoon when at Sookunpoo they were forced to share the points with the much improved 12th Battery R. A. eleven.

A total of no less than six goals was registered. This is the first drawn game in the Tournament.

Divot's Golf Notes

AS predicted in these columns last week M. W. Budd rose to the occasion to produce excellent golf and became the Colony's Champion in the recent competition of this tournament.

Good weather conditions prevailed throughout the competition which should have had the effect of returning lower scores, but I expect the mental hazard of competitive golf with card and pencil led to disastrous results to many who entered. Budd's returns of 75 for the Old Course and 71 for the New Course were excellent efforts, and no doubt he would have returned a better score for the first round had his putting not failed him on one or two greens. A. B. Stewart, last year's winner, took second place with an aggregate of 154 and his return of 35 for the outward nine of the Old Course deserves special mention.

A. H. FERGUSON'S return to form in the afternoon is worthy of comment, and his 74 secured for him the prize for the best afternoon round. There were few at Fanning last Sunday who believed he had taken 91 strokes for the morning round, but such was the case. A nine at the 10th and three putts on a number of greens soon pile up strokes.

A. E. Lissaman who won the prize for the best morning round, has greatly improved his game and did very well to return an 81, tying for third place after the morning round, along with Marton and Wilson.

It was hardly expected that D. C. Wilson would be successful in carrying off the visitors prize, but this he did and his 81 over the Old Course gave him a good lead to achieve this honour. F. E. A. Remedios who won this prize last year did not seem to be up to his usual form and was not on too good terms with his drives.

ON the whole the tournament was a great success and the decision of playing the competition over the old and new courses was favourably received. This arrangement is a far better test of golf and will no doubt be continued for future championships.

GENE SARAZEN, one of the best golfers of the day, says that golf is like bridge; you must concentrate, once you give up you are finished. And the moment concentration is lost away go your figures and Old Man Par has the laugh on you.

GOWFF! Noo that's a game for you, states Sir Harry Laidler. One of the best things Scotland has given the world. There's something extraordinary good about gowff when folks like me, if they cannot return a low score, can put up as high a score as anybody without trying, then come to the nineteenth hole confessing to having had a great time.

BOBBY JONES, in winning his last British open, is reported to have required only a spade masher or masher niblick after his drive. With a few more exhibitions of this kind it is possible alterations to the present ball or redesigning of courses will occur. The present season in England—in tournament golf—has witnessed a real orgy of low scoring.

A VETERAN, on the cause of topping, says:—Topping is frequently attributed to failure to keep the eye on the ball, but in most cases it is merely a result of the body swinging ahead of the hands. In addition to topping, the ball may be smothered and go but a little distance. If the body does not move, the risk of topping will be reduced to a minimum. too many clubs. J. Kirkwood, ex-Australian professional, now in the United States, never played better golf—from all accounts—than on his first trip to England, with only seven or eight clubs. About a year ago the peak was reached in the number of clubs recommended.

D. R. Alister Mackenzie, noted golf architect, considers the following as essentials for the ideal course:—

1. A really great course must be a constant source of pleasure to the greatest possible number of players.
2. It must require strategy in the playing as well as skill, otherwise it cannot continue to hold the golfer's interest.
3. It must give the average player a fair chance, and at the same time it must require the utmost from the expert who tries for sub-par scores.
4. All natural beauty should be preserved, natural hazards should be utilised, and artificiality should be minimised.

BOBBIE JONES, in his talkie series, "How I Play Golf," is again interesting and instructive. He stresses the advantages of playing the ball opposite the left foot when driving. The main advantages being (1) more weight and power behind the stroke, (2) a lower flighted ball with more run, as this method of driving is more of a sweep than a descending hit, which produces a high ball when played off the right foot. In playing against a wind Jones plays the ball opposite his left toe and advocates swinging more easily. He indicates the natural tendency is to hit harder in order to make up for the loss of length caused by the wind. Jones advocates hitting straight through the ball on the line of play instead of hitting inside out. The inside out method is primarily a corrective measure for slicing. A noticeable feature of this series (the driver) is the position of his club at the top of his swing. It is pointing to the right of the objective and not parallel with the line of flight.

THE "pocket Hercules" of golf, G. Sarazen, British and American open champion, is only a few inches over five feet in height, but he is a very powerful player, and required a spoon for his seconds only at one hole at Prince's 6,700 yds., the venue of the last British open championship. Sarazen is reported to have played a mashie out of rough nearly 200 yards during one of his rounds.

BORDERER FORWARDS WIN GAME

Stevens and Hamilton Prominent.

WEAK NAVY SIDE LOSE.

(By "Serum Half.")

At Sookunpoo yesterday the South Wales Borderers regimental fifteen, with the exception of Lt. Martin and Pte. Hoskins, defeated the weak Royal Navy side by a goal and five tries (20 pts.) to a penalty goal and a try (3 pts.).

The Borderers pack completely dominated play and were greatly responsible for the big military win. Walters was a good moving forward, displaying a keen sense of initiative, while Pratt and Gilmore were conspicuous in the loose.

Stevens, the "Swabs" fly half, was the outstanding player of the match. He was magnificent in attack, his neat cut-through being a feature of the game. He scored an excellent try in the closing minutes with a short punt ahead which bounced perfectly for him together and go over near the posts.

Hamilton also gave a good display in attack, while his defensive tactics were very sound. He scored a spectacular try in the second half, after Walters had opened up the game from a series of loose scrums, and sold the dummy to two Army defenders in a delightfully simple manner.

Lewis (2), Hamilton (2), Walters and Stevens scored for the Borderers, while Hamilton converted one of the six tries. Donald, the Navy's lone try and Buckling kicked the penalty goal. "Navy"—Lt. Buckley; Lt. Lockley, Ldg. Seaman Branson, Lt. Grove, Lt. Donald; A. B. Buyan; A. B. Kay; Lt. Fisher, Mid. Stoddart, A. B. Braddick, Mid. Curver, Mre. Budd, Lt. Hawkins, Lt. Griffith and Sub-Lt. Nicholson.

YORKSHIREMEN TO THE FORE.

Sutcliffe's Third Three Figure Innings.

LEYLAND'S AGGRESSIVENESS.

A crowd of 12,000 witnessed Sutcliffe and Leyland, the two Yorkshire players, in a first wicket partnership of 223 against South Australia here yesterday. The pair were undefeated at lunch with 93 runs on the board. At the close of play the M.C.C. tourists had scored 341 for 5 wickets.

Herbert Sutcliffe, in compiling his third century of the tour, hit up 154 in 240 minutes, which included two sixes and 13 boundaries. Maurice Leyland in an aggressive innings scored 127 in 196 minutes, hitting no fewer than 14 boundaries.

The Nawab of Pataudi, who commenced the tour with a sparkling innings for 166 against West Australia, was dismissed for a "duck."—Reuter.

"H.D." AND MISS RUMJAHN ENTER THIRD ROUND.

Stocker and Miss Hancock Lose 6-1, 3-6, 6-2.

Two Second Round matches in the Colony Mixed Doubles Championship were commenced on the I.R.C. courts yesterday afternoon. H. D. Rumjahn and Miss R. Rumjahn advanced into the Third Round at the expense of Lt. Stocker and Miss R. Hancock, whom they beat by 6-1, 3-6, 6-2. Bad light, however, caused the other match to be abandoned with E. C. Fincher and Miss O. Dalziel leading S. A. Rumjahn and Miss C. Botelho 10-8, 5-3.

In the latter match Fincher and his partner held set point on three occasions in the eighth game, but owing to the poor light were unable to take advantage of them.

Preliminary Bouts In Royal Navy Boxing

Some good fights were witnessed last night at Murray Barracks, when the Royal Navy held some preliminaries and finals in the Eighth Flotilla Destroyer Boxing Tournament.

Most of the contestants were evenly matched, but only one fight produced first class boxing, that of the Middleweight class between Wedge and Fudge of H.M.S. Wishart.

Both men were very evenly matched and treated the spectators to three excellent rounds of which there was very little to choose between the men.

There was only one knockout, the Light-Heavyweight final between Bradley (H.M.S. Whitehall) and Challis (H.M.S. Whitehead) which went the three rounds. Bradley inflicted a crushing defeat in the last round when he punished his man severely with a good left lead followed up by a devastating right hook which felled Challis.

Results:—
Featherweight Championship:—A. B. Brand (H.M.S. Verity) defeated A. B. Mogford (H.M.S. Witch).
Lightweight Championship:—A. B. Allport (H.M.S. Witch) beat A. B. Evans (H.M.S. Veteran); A. B. Cornell (H.M.S. Wild Swan) beat A. B. Conyon (H.M.S. Whitehall). Final.—A. B. Allport beat A. B. Connel.

Welterweight:—A. B. Payne (H.M.S. Keppel) beat A. B. Fulton (H.M.S. Witch); Crouch (H.M.S. Whitehead) beat A. B. Gibson (H.M.S. Verity). Final.—Crouch beat Payne.

Middleweight:—Wedge (H.M.S. Wishart) beat Fudge (H.M.S. Wishart).

Light-Heavyweight:—Bradley (H.M.S. Whitehall) beat Challis (H.M.S. Whitehead).

Yachting Notes

THE possibility of one of the large American "J" class racing yachts visiting Cowes next summer is now receiving serious consideration in yachting circles in the United States.

It is understood that the New York Yacht Club would not welcome a challenge for the America's Cup at the present time, whilst the general depression throughout the United States remains acute.

This being the case, British yachtsmen do not wish to embarrass the New York Yacht Club with a challenge at the moment.

On the other hand, it is considered most desirable that the agreement upon Measurement Rules, ratified in 1930 by British and American yachtsmen at New York, enabling international racing between "J" class yachts to be carried on, should be followed by practical result, namely, some sporting races between "J" class yachts of the two countries.

A friendly visit of an American "J" class yacht to Cowes in 1933 to meet the English "J" class yachts, the Britannia and the rest of her class, would achieve that object.

Whilst the issuing of a Cup challenge would not be pleasing to leading American yachtsmen, this alternative would be attended by amenities, sporting, social, and international, which would be much appreciated. For this reason the Americans are considering the possibility of a "J" class vessel visiting Cowes.

IT is nearly forty years since the New York Yacht Club's flag flew on a big racing cutter—or, as the Americans say, "sloop"—in British waters. The Vigilant, in 1894, and Navahoe, in 1895, were the last of these vessels to come to Cowes. The time is ripe for the visit of an American sloop.

The new "J" class yacht, which is being built by Camper and Nicholson for Mr. W. L. Stephenson, and Mr. Sopwith's Shamrock, would afford the American vessel the scientific trial which yachtsmen of both sides desire.

The sentiment which surrounds a meeting between his Majesty's old-time Britannia and new vessels would appeal no less to our warm-hearted American opponents than it has appealed to all British sportsmen.

HONOURS EVEN AT CELTIC PARK.

Rangers Gain Point In Great Match.

Celtic and Rangers enjoyed a terrific battle for supremacy at Celtic Park, but, at the end, however, were even in a 1-1 draw. A feature of the match was that both scored their goals when playing against a strong wind.

Celtic opened in dashing fashion, and in 14 minutes were a goal up. McGilivray, on the right, exposed a weakness in the Rangers' defence, and, quickly spotting a chance, cut in, lobbed the ball over, and both McGilivray and Napier went for it. The ball smashed into the

THERE were several of the Yacht Club's racing skippers who missed one of the most exciting and interesting events of the season on October 27, writes a Shanghai paper. There was a splendid sailing wind for the weekly mid-day Harbour Race, but only three boats went to the line. These three made a great tussle of it and finished up with only twenty seconds over the three after having sailed through what all the crews agreed was one of the best races of the season.

THE course was from the headquarters line, up-river, round the No. 5 naval buoy to port, down-river, round the second mercantile buoy to port, and back to a finish on the starting line, a total distance of five miles. The Pixie (Lock), Ghost (Allen), and Phooka (Carter) got away to a level start, though well apart, Pixie on the Pootung side, the Ghost favouring Shanghai, and Phooka in the centre. There was a strong beam wind on the way up to the first mark, but the naval line caused a lot of trouble by taking the wind, and the boats had some quiet moments in spite of the strength of the breeze.

APPROACHING the mark, the Phooka had a lead of 50 yds., but she lost it through an argument with a big sampan which would not bear away to let her through. This gave the Ghost a matter of 20 yds. ahead, whilst the Pixie was about as much astern of the Phooka. These positions were retained for the rest of the journey. The Pixie also had a great deal to say to a sampan, but her skipper, as invariably, was equal to the occasion and came through the affair without loss of time.

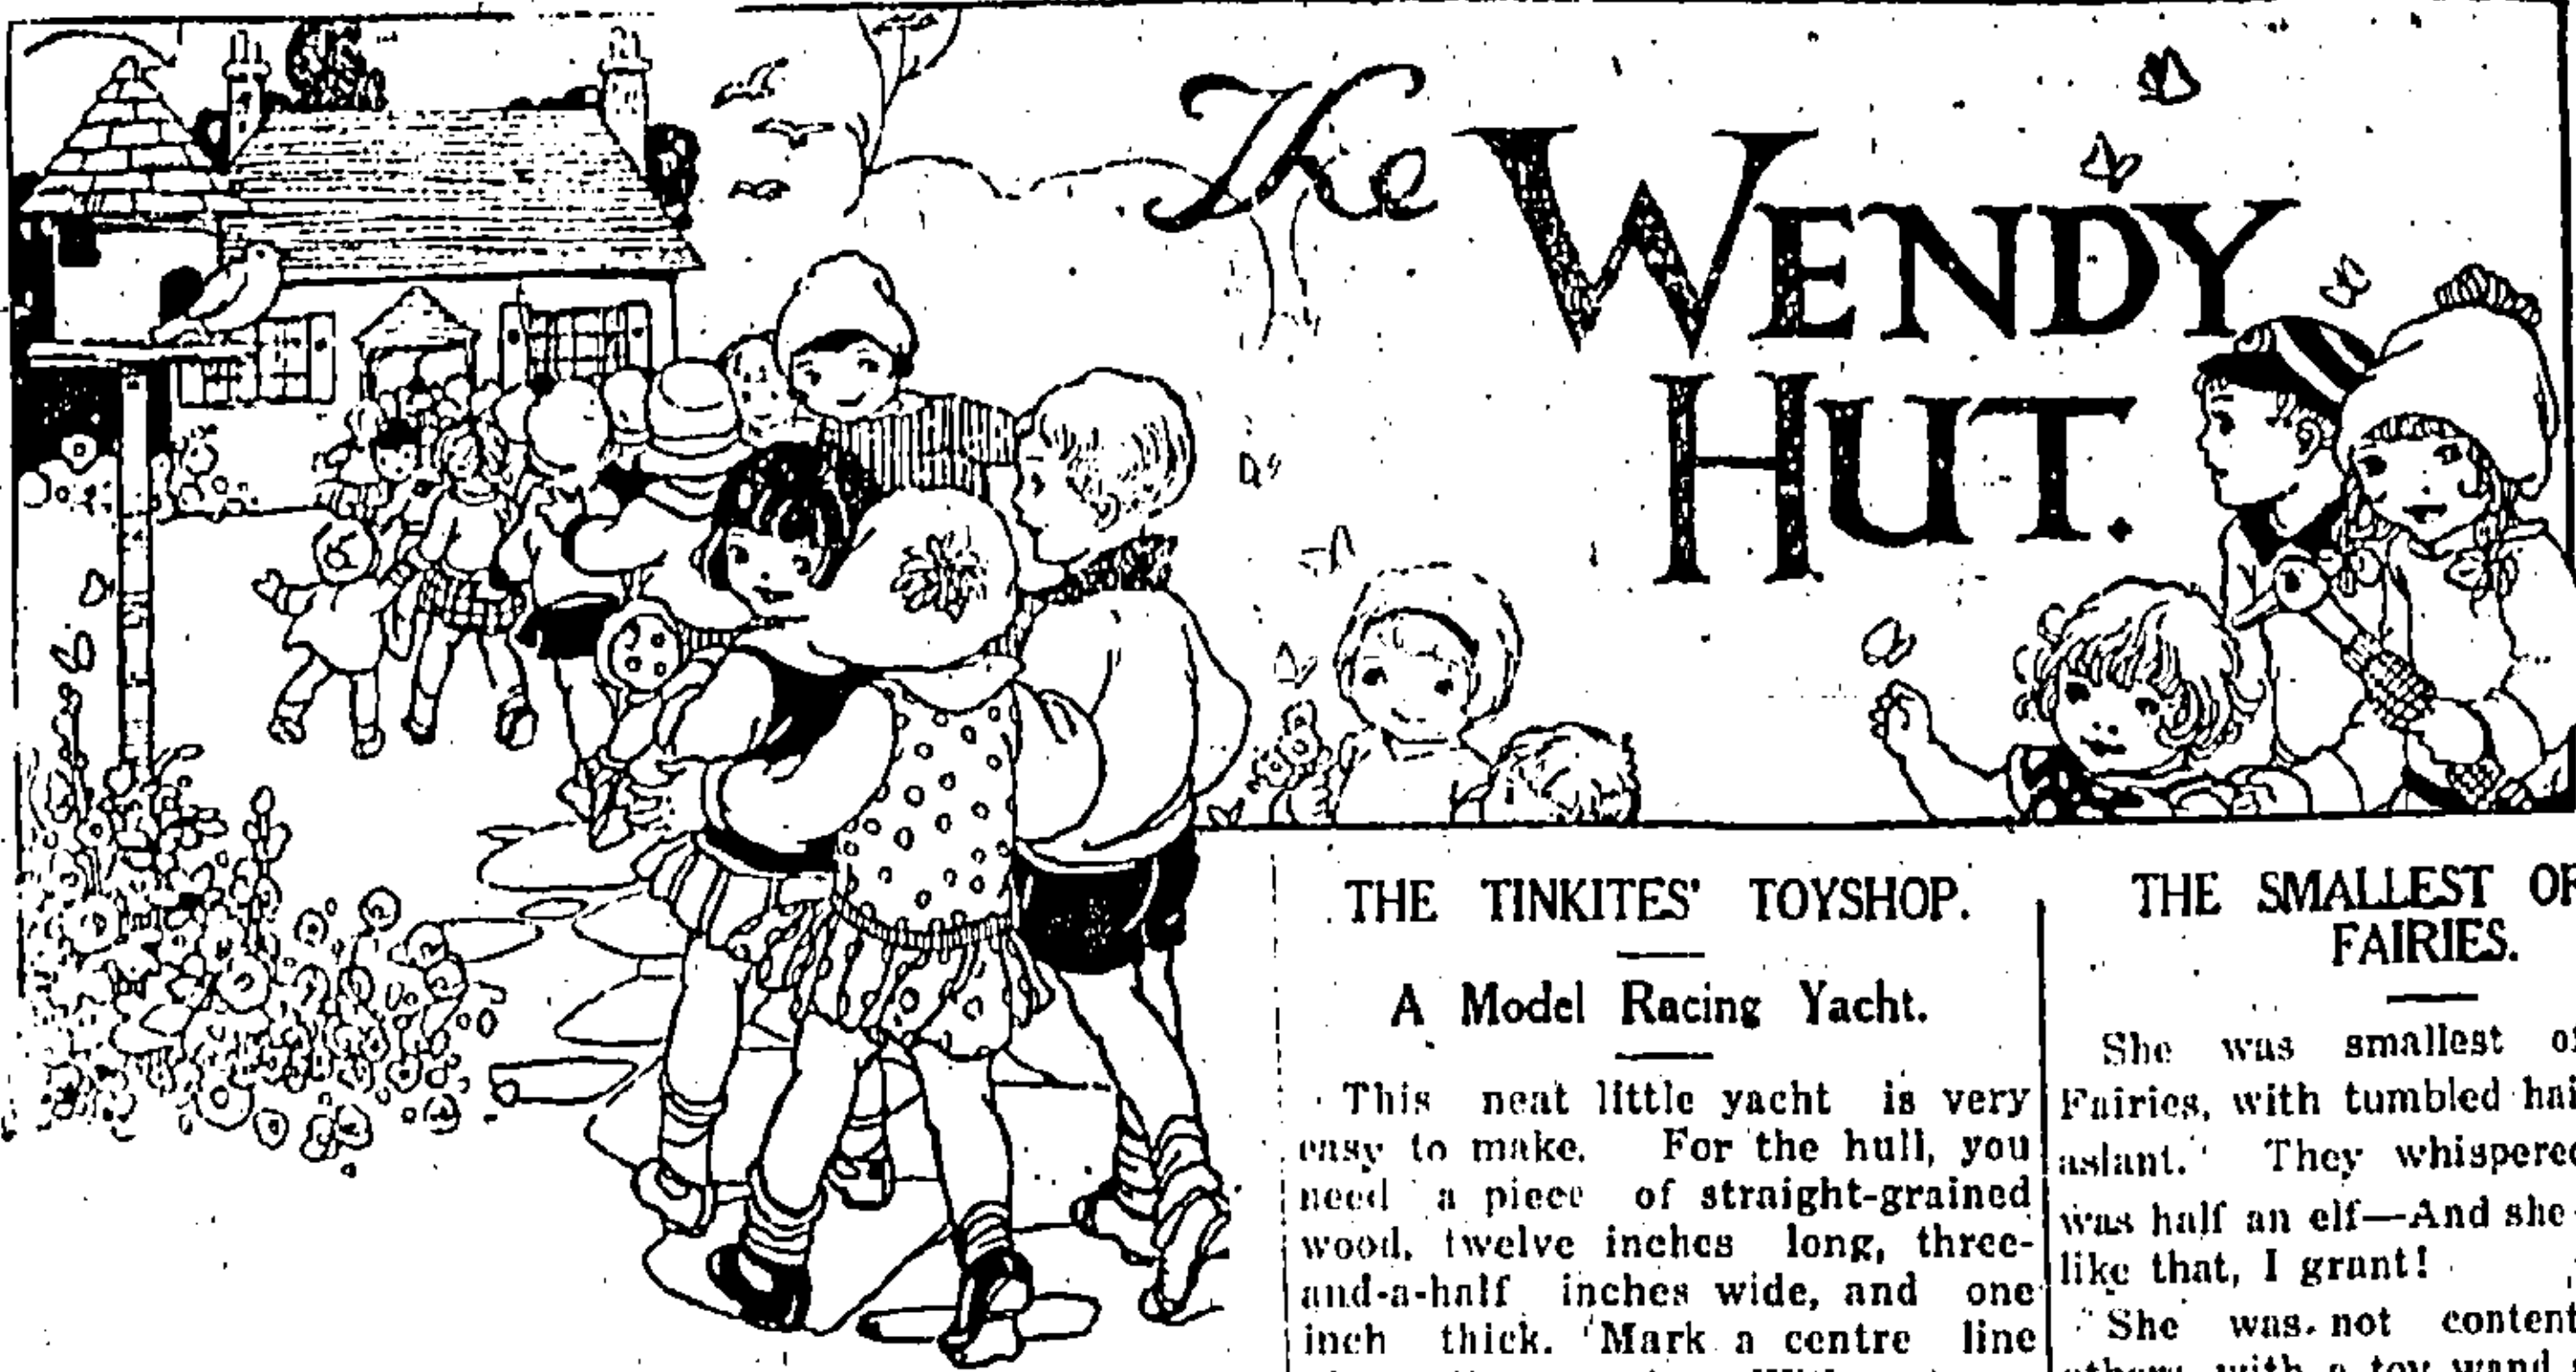

THE beat round the second mark found the Ghost cleverly scrapping about to obtain a good lead over the other two, but thereafter both the Phooka and Pixie made up a lot of distance, and in the case of the latter it was sufficient to enable her, with the aid of her handicap, to obtain first position, the final placings being: Elapsed Heat Corr.
Pixie ..... 38m. 35s. 4.40 33.55
Ghost ..... 38 00 4.00 34.00
Phooka .... 38 15 3.10 35.05

net off McGilivray's head. After their goal Celtic went from strength to strength, and Rangers found the strong wind they had been finding a hindrance rather than a help, and had to do some desperate defending. Towards the interval Celtic came near scoring once or twice, on one occasion particularly, when Hamilton had to throw himself along the ground to save a neat flick by McGilivray. At half-time Celtic held their one goal lead. Sixteen minutes after the restart McPhail equalised for Rangers, who, playing against the wind and able to control the ball better, were a much improved side.

THE TINKITES' TOYSHOP.

A Model Racing Yacht.

This neat little yacht is very easy to make. For the hull, you need a piece of straight-grained wood, twelve inches long, three-and-a-half inches wide, and one inch thick. Mark a centre line along diagram A. With a tenon saw, roughly cut away the parts marked B, and carve the rest to shape with the aid of a wide chisel. By glancing at diagram C, you will see what the side view of the hull should be like when finished. Diagram D is a section taken through the widest part of the hull. After you have shaped the hull satisfactorily, rub it all over with glass-paper.

To make the keel, take a piece of three-eighths-inch wood and cut it

THE SMALLEST OF THE FAIRIES.

She was smallest of all the Fairies, with tumbled hair and eyes aslant. They whispered that she was half an elf—And she looked just like that, I grant!

She was not content, like the others, with a toy wand and pair of wings. "I want a true wand," she would argue, "So that I can do marvellous things!"

They told her none but Royal Fairies had wands that could cast a charm. Then she danced on her toes, and promised she would never do any harm.

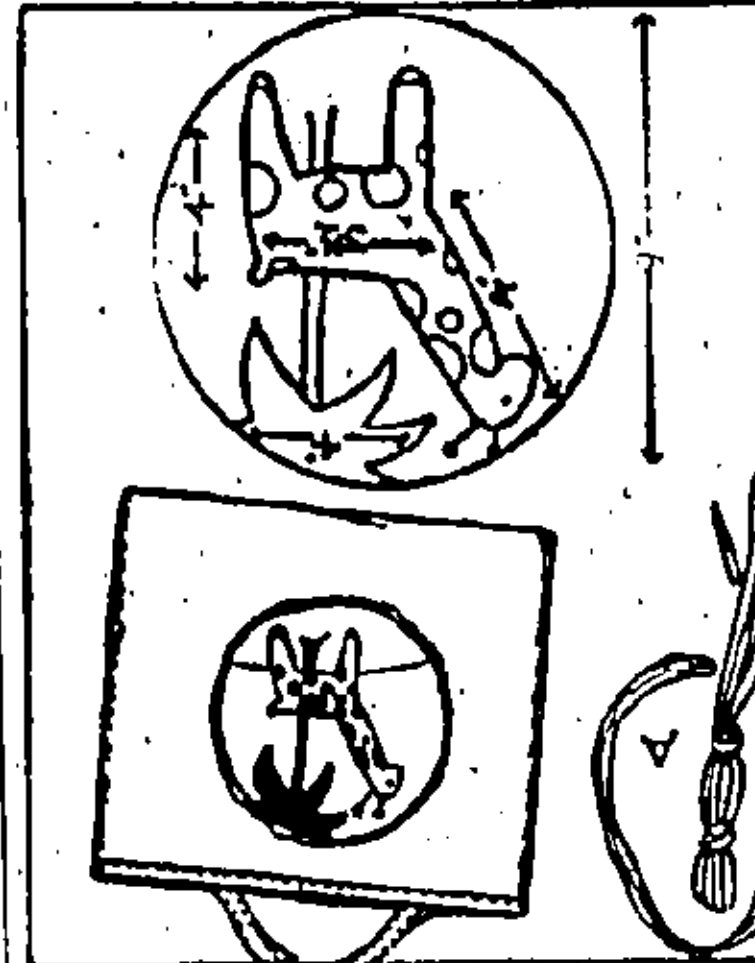

They sent her to gather the honey. She ate it or gave it away. Then they told her to polish the stars.

WENDY'S LITTLE NEEDLEWOMEN.

A Bag To Take To School.

How would you like to make a bag like the one sketched, as a present for a little friend who is starting school this term? It will hold slippers, books, lunch-time apple, and any other small oddments. So it will be very useful.

You'll need a piece of coloured linen or casement cloth, eighteen inches wide and thirty inches long, for the outside of the bag; and a piece the same size in a contrasting colour for the lining.

The decorated school-bag about which Dressmaker tells you to-day.

Fold the outside material in half, so that it measures eighteen inches across and fifteen inches deep. Take a plate about nine inches across, lay this in the middle of one side, go round it with black chalk, and then go over the outline with orange wool couched down with black. Diagram A shows the couching in progress. You'll need four strands of orange wool and three of black to work with. Just hold the orange wool with your thumb along the chalked outline, and stitch it down with the black wool, keeping the stitches about half an inch apart.

Now copy the Giraffe and the tree on to a piece of paper, following the measurements given in Diagram B. When you have got the outline right, trace them into the circle, by rubbing chalk thickly over the back of the paper and going over the lines with a steel knitting-needle. Outline Giraffe with orange wool stem-stitching, and work his spots with black wool satin-stitch. The palm-tree trunk is suggested by three or four rows of brown stem-stitching, and the spiky leaves by bright green stem-stitching.

Press the embroidery well, sew up the sides of the bag, and turn it right side out. Stitch up the sides of the lining, and slip this inside the outer bag, taking care to get the two wrong sides facing each other. Sew neatly together at the top, and make two narrow handles from folded strips of mater.

OUR SWEET-MAKING CORNER.

Simple Nut Toffee.

Shell and peel the nuts you wish to use, and cut them into pieces the size of peas. You will require a good teaspoonful of chopped nuts.

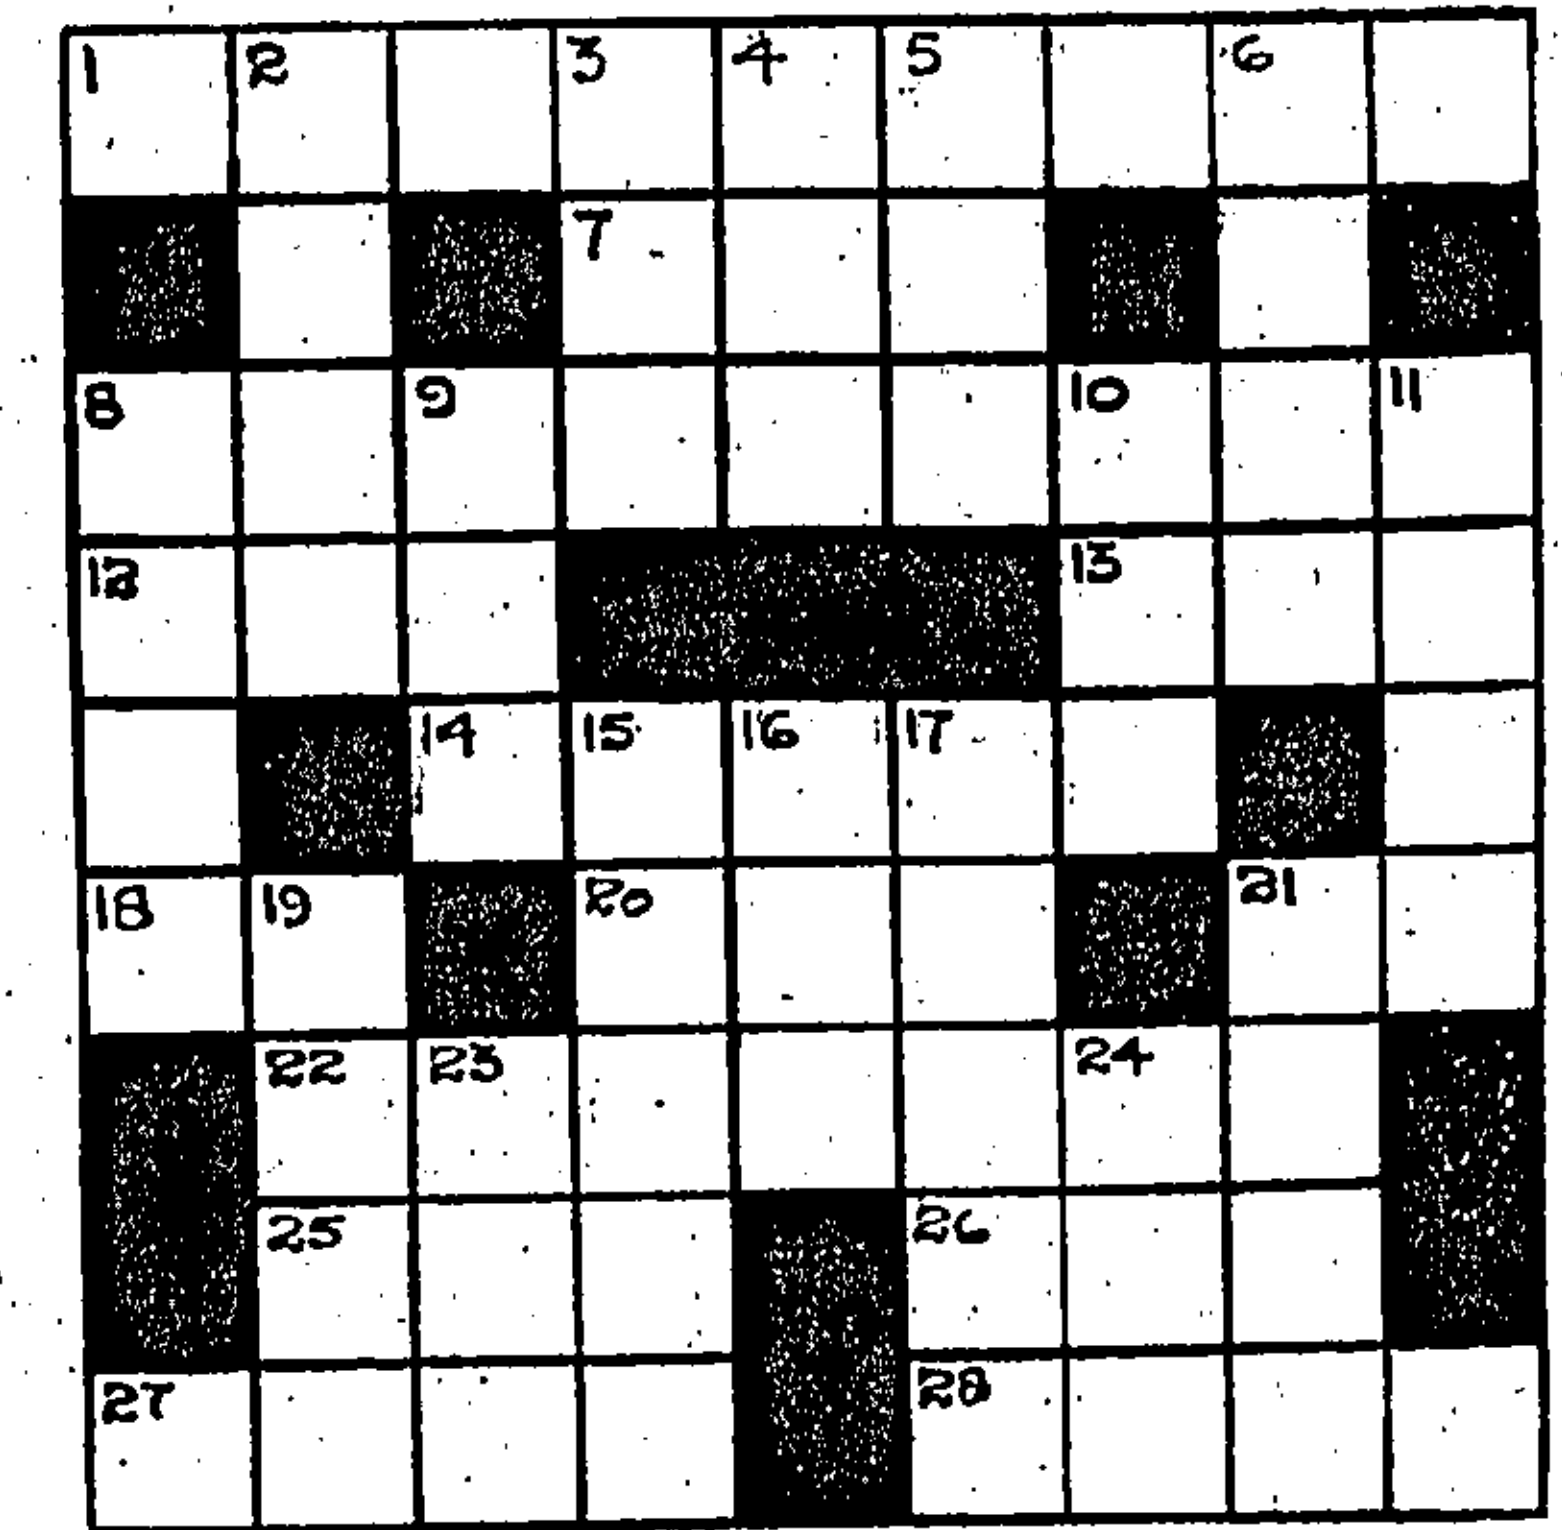

Now take a piece of butter the size of an egg, cut it into pieces, and put it in a saucepan. Add one pound of sugar, melt it slowly, stirring gently, and when it forms a syrup, boil it for five minutes, or until a little tried in cold water hardens at once. Remove the saucepan from the fire, and pour the toffee into a well buttered tin. Sprinkle the nuts over the top immediately, and allow to cool.

Coconut toffee may be made in the same way, only add the coconut to the syrup as soon as you remove the saucepan from the fire, stir well, and turn the toffee on to a buttered tin.

Long Ago Stories

The Knighting Of Guy

They awoke him early in the morning. And when he got up from his bed of fresh hay scented with herbs, Guy remembered that the greatest hours of his life had come after many years of preparation. On the morrow, his lord would dub him knight and he would become the protector of the feeble, the helpless, and the suffering. He was twenty-one.

"The bath is ready," said the falconer. "See, the very hawks bid thee good morning."

Guy's falcons were chained to perches round the room, and they linked their silver bells as he caressed them.

Guy was left in darkness, save for a little lamp hanging over the altar.

When he had washed, Guy put on a new white tunic to signify purity; then a red one in anticipation of the blood he would shed in battle; then a black robe, the symbol of death. He ate no food, for he must fast and pray for twenty-four hours. His parents and his sisters and brothers came and kissed him. Muriel wept, for soon her beloved brother would go with the Crusades, while she stayed at home and embroidered banners for the soldiers of the Holy Cross.

Guy was alone all day, but in the evening the priest came and let him on foot to the Church. The village folk watched him as he passed by in his black robe, but not a word did they utter. Guy entered the Church alone, the huge doors closed upon him, and he was left in darkness save for the little lamp hanging over the altar.

He prayed all night and in the morning he heard sounds of rejoicing in the village and the stamping of many horses. Then the Church doors were flung open, and into the church came the young man's sponsors—noblemen who vouched for his good conduct—and his parents, and a gallily dressed throng of young men and maidens, and his lord and master whom he had served for sixteen years.

Guy's eyes were full of tears as he knelt at the altar, while the priest said mass, then blessed the young man's sword.

"Go humbly to thy lord," murmured the priest.

So Guy knelt before his lord and kissed his hand in homage. Then his sister took off his black robe and gave him a beautiful tunic of blue silk, and his lord came forward to arm him. First the spurs were fastened to his boots, then his shining armour was buckled on, the helmet was placed on his head, and last of all the lord put the sword upon the young man. In the street the people began to cheer, and lovely maidens prepared to throw roses in Guy's path as he walked to his horse. All were eager to take part in the great celebration tournament. With a great joy in his heart, Guy fell upon his knees before his lord.

Then the lord's voice rang out as he struck Guy's shoulder with his sword.

"In the name of God, of Saint Michael, and of Saint George, I make thee Knight! Be valiant, and fearless, and loyal. Arise, Sir Guy!"

LIVING TIN-TACKS!

If you visit the Marquesas Islands in the South Seas, don't wade across streams after dark! If you do, you'll hop like a man who has accidentally walked on a number of tin-tacks.

In the streams of the islands there are hundreds upon hundreds of snails, all with little brittle spines on their shells. During the daytime, the snails lie concealed among the stones, but at night they crawl out on top to hunt for food—and any unwary traveller suffers in consequence.

This isn't the only odd thing about the islands. They are inhabited by people who are, perhaps, the longest-living folk in the world. One old lady, who was alive in 1926 and is probably still going strong, was born before Napoleon was defeated at Waterloo in 1816!

It is believed that the drinking water is responsible for the extraordinarily long lives of the natives, although white residents, despite the fact that they drink the same water, seem to die at the usual age.

But instead she painted them grey! One day on my journey I caught her sewing babyclouds in a knot. I clipped off her wings pretty quickly, then hurried her home at a trot.

The others looked solemn and frightened when they saw her there on my breath. They said: "Without wings to protect her, the North Wind will blow her to death!"

Now I was so strong and so mighty, and she was so frail and so small, that I was unable to guide her. She laughed as she cried out: "I fall!"

And then she escaped from my power, and quickly to Earth she dropped down. I sought her in vain all that winter, in field and in forest and town.

We mourned for our little lost Fairy. I thought of her oft in my chase over sea and river and mountain. Then one day I saw her elf face!

From a hedge-row gully she hailed me: "North Wind, I am under a spell. Come toss me, though, still I'll escape you—down here people call me Speedwell!"

The Tree Worshippers

"Perhaps the Buana does not know that the bamboo is the quickest growing of M'ti's sons. The young shoots, from sunrise to sunset, grow the length of a man's hand. I, as priest, am commanded to lay you on one of the sprouting trees that the saplings may pass through your body and gain strength worthy of M'ti's sons," he explained simply.

"That the growing saplings, sharp as needles, may grow through me . . . God!"

King was a tough man rendered desperate. Drawing up his knees, he leaped out at Funga-Kamba's face. The light was bad, but, meeting resistance, following by a gasping grunt, told him that his aim was not at fault. Again and again he drove his feet at the black head of the kneeling native until he thrust him through the opening of the flimsy shelter.

The following reaction left him weak and shaking, and drenched with sweat, his brain a crawl with active imagination. The whole night both man and woman patrolled round the shelter.

It was still dark when Funga-Kamba carried King, biting, kicking and jerking his body as much as his bonds would allow, through the dripping forest to a small clearing. In one corner a small clearing had been made by spreading and smoothing the earth. At each corner four stout stakes each of these, in spite of King's were driven into the ground, and to struggles, Funga-Kamba tied his wrists and ankles so that he lay on his back. A few pegs placed under his arms and sides prevented lateral movement.

In this position he lay for hours, while the man knelt with upturned face in priestly ecstasy.

A darkening of the forest, gloom and night.

Who was that? A faint pricking under the shoulder told King that his torture had commenced. He tried to move but only increased the growing irritation. 'Soon other sharp pains told him that his skin was being perforated. The shoots grew with incredible rapidity. He tried arching his body, but this position increased the pressure of his shoulders. At last the agony was insupportable; his body sank on the piercing points as he fainted.

He did not hear the shattering crash of an elephant gun, nor feel the crushing weight of Funga-Kamba's body thrusting him down on the hungry bamboo needles. The next thing he knew was that he was lying on his chest and someone was bathing his back with fire. He was wet. . . . It must be boiling water. . . . Anyhow, he was not lying on his back. . . . A feeling of security soothed him into deep sleep.

When he awoke it was light, and he saw Ali, his partner's gun-bearer, grinning and bending over him. To his eager questions Ali told him that he had slept two days, and that Funga-Kamba was dead, but that the woman had escaped. "Here is where he fell," he said simply. "Is it your wish that we break camp, Buana?"

King assented, and a chair was soon made to carry him without pressing on his still painful back. As they passed the clearing King saw that M'ti had not been cheated of his sacrifice. Green shoots protruded through the body of Funga-Kamba.

THE END.

TRADE IN OLD SHIPS DISCUSSED.

Duty To Be Imposed In Japan.

Commencing November 15, the Japanese Customs Houses will impose duties on steel materials of old vessels imported and broken up in Japan. Scrap iron will also be dutiable. Such import duties will of course be imposed only when they are intended for remanufacturing purposes.

These steel materials, being free of import duty, are at present marketed at very low prices, and this is considered unfair for those who pay a very high duty on pig iron. In the recent extraordinary session of the Diet, when import duties were raised to 26 per cent. on pig iron and 35 per cent. on ordinary steel material, it was arranged that material from old vessels broken up and employed for re-rolling should be made dutiable. The whole matter was left to the Customs Houses. Apprehensive of effects on importers, the Customs authorities refrained from any immediate action.

Hardest hit will be small steel manufacturers who buy 100,000 tons a year from ship breakers. These parties have been saved by a recent activity of trade, but if they are to pay import duty, they will again be put in a very difficult position. Assisted by the Department of Commerce and Industry, they have been discussing the establishment of an industrial guild. It is hoped that the present tariff problem will expedite the formation of this control guild.

As far as the steel market in general is concerned, the present decision of the Customs authorities is welcomed.

A SEAMAN'S WEDDING.

The saloon of the G.W.R. tender Sir Francis Drake was turned into a church outside the three-mile limit off Plymouth and a marriage was performed in it by the Rev. C. W. H. Sewell. The couple were Miss Hase Ottesen and Mr. Bertram Thus Pyness, both Norwegians.

The bridegroom had just returned to England in the s.s. Chidar, of which he is second mate, after being away from Europe for four years. Miss Ottesen went to Plymouth to meet him. They decided to get married forthwith, but neither of them had the necessary residential qualifications to be married in England, and it was found that the only way a marriage could be performed to the satisfaction of the Norwegian and British authorities was at sea.

FROM THE "DECK" OF CUNARD HOUSE.

Telescope View Of London City.

The new City headquarters of the Cunard and its associated companies are now open.

I sought out Cunard House and found her berthed in Lendenhall-street—a glistening eight-decker liner, her flags waving bravely far above the traffic turmoil, writes a correspondent in the Singapore Free Press.

I embarked, and was whisked upwards. On the top floor was the board room. No extravagance here to perturb the eyes of anxious shareholders—just the horseshoe table and a set of chairs from the old Carmania.

Up a companion way and out on the promenade deck—a hundred feet above the streets.

A breeze that seemed to smack of salt blew fresh as I scanned the horizon. Southwards, the Crystal Palace, and behind me the heights of northern London.

From the bridge we made out a speck of white and a familiar red and black funnel. A shipmate with a telescope told me that she was the Alaudia just back from Montreal and lying in the King George V. dock.

The architects of the interior design and decoration of the Aquitania and Franconia also planned Cunard House.

NEW SEAPORT FOR CHINA.

Commission's Advice On Big Project.

The creation of a new ocean port for North China, on the north shore of the Gulf of Pohai, is recommended in the report of the Great Northern Port Commission, which has been studying the matter for two years. This project for a deep-water ocean port, free from ice, originated with the late Dr. Sun Yat Sen, whose plans for the modern development of China as a republic included three great ocean ports for North China, East China, and South China.

The Nationalist Government organized the National Construction Commission to carry out important public works along the lines of Dr. Sun Yat Sen's plans, and in 1929 this commission appointed a board to investigate the Great Northern Port scheme. In 1931, representatives of the Ministry of Railways and the Ministry of Communications were added to the Board, which was then reorganized as the Commission for the Development of the Great Northern Port. The first report has now been presented by Dr. Shu-tien Li, chairman and chief engineer of the commission. Extensive surveys, soundings and commercial studies have been made, a meteorological station has been established, and general plans have been prepared for the port and its city.

Site Near Chinwangtao.

The site is about mid-way between Taku, 70 nautical miles, and Chinwangtao, 64 miles, in longitude 113 degs. 51 mins. E and latitude 39 degs. 11 mins. It has the special advantage of being nearer to deep water than any of the other proposed or existing ports on the Gulf of Pohai. Its distances are 147 nautical miles from Dairen, 126 miles from Hulutao, 96 miles from Tientsin, and 160 miles from Chefoo.

While Tientsin is an important commercial centre of North China, it is situated some distance up the river, has only shallow-draft accommodation, owing to the amount of silt which accumulates in spite of dredging, and is frozen up in the winter months. The Taku Bar at the mouth of the river, and about 6 miles off shore, is also a serious obstacle to ocean steamer commerce. The navigation channel inside the bar permits only a draft of 14ft., and sometimes only 10ft., so that large vessels have to anchor outside the bar.

The total cost is estimated at $15,000,000 and the work will require 15 years to complete.

THE PROBLEM OF IDLE SHIPS.

Leading Owners Meet In London.

Leading British shipowners, all members of the council of the Chamber of Shipping, met in private in London to discuss the problem of the world's surplus tonnage of vessels. Afterwards the following statement was issued:—"It was reported that a voluntary laying-up scheme prepared by a special committee had been submitted to owners throughout the country, but that from replies received it was clear that this particular scheme would not command a sufficient measure of support. It was, however, decided by a majority to explore the possibility of 'scrapping.' Reference was made to 'the serious position which has arisen from the continued decline in world trade and the growth of foreign subsidies to shipping.' It was pointed out that the Council endorsed the Shipping Policy Committee's recommendation that the industry should place before the Government the increasing gravity of the position, and the need for a serious attempt at the forthcoming World Economic Conference to remove trade barriers and restore the volume of cargoes in the world's overseas trade.

A large waterspout was seen from Hastings seafloor.

It first appeared like a column of steam joining sea and sky about a mile from the shore.

It moved rapidly towards the cliffs east of the town, where it vanished like a puff of smoke. Rain fell in torrents for about a quarter of an hour afterwards.

TO-DAY'S RACES

The second race of the day should be the best one, and at first glance it seems that the issue of the Fremantle St. Leger will be decided between The Giraffe (Mr. Frost) and Polar Star (Mr. Butler). Polar Star should not be lost sight of, and the race will no doubt be distributed between the three.

In the Castle Peak Handicap, "B" Class, Kong Bros' Lunar Star catches the eye as a potential winner, but he will find strong opposition in Valorous, Flying Tourist and The Tiger. The race, which is over seven furlongs, is a very open one, and a fast time should be returned.

Liberty Bay, who last week clinched the Aggregate Stakes for the Dunbar stable, will be ridden by Mr. Frost in the Hong Kong St. Leger, and will be made a hot favourite. There is certainly nothing else in the race to touch him. The other three entries are Blue Star, Navy Hall and Wild Life and I fancy the latter for a place if he starts.

Twenty-one entries have been received for the Fanling Handicap, "E" Class, the best of which appears to be Whoopee (Mr. Carroll). Tien Feng Shan, who may be ridden by Mr. Frost, has been showing good form recently, and took a place at the last meeting at the Valley.

The novice jockeys will be out in the Shum Chun Handicap, and Mr. Carroll again appears to be well mounted. He will ride Ajax, who should be favourite. However, many things happen in novice riders' events, and it is possible that Mr. Noronha will bring home Indiana.

In the Sub-Griffins St. Leger, Racing Boy should have very little difficulty in winning, and is one of the certainties of the day. There are eight entries and both Bistre and Cy-pres, who will be ridden by Chinese jockeys, are good for places.

The biggest field of the day is entered in the last event, the Tai-po Handicap, "D" class, and although it is not yet certain who will be riding Adam, he can be depended upon to give a good performance.

The Air Navigation Directions (Hong Kong), 1932, have been revised, two paragraphs of the former directions having been revoked and a new sub paragraph inserted. This paragraph deals with the qualifications required for a ground engineer.

MURDER OF SAMPAN WOMEN FEARED.

Body Of One Found; Other Missing.

The two boat-women reported missing yesterday, are believed to have been murdered.

Leung Tai Tai, 40, one of two, was found floating near the south arm of the Government Depot, opposite the Lai Chi Kok Female Prison, at 1 p.m. yesterday afternoon. Her daughter, Wong Sze-yat, 20, is still missing.

After a search yesterday, the junk was found tied to the Water Depot, Lai Chi Kok, abandoned Bloodstains were discovered on the deck, while personal property of the two boat-women had been disturbed.

The junk on which the two women worked, was engaged by two men at the Yaumati Shelter for a journey to Cheung Sha Wan on Thursday night. The women were reported missing next day.

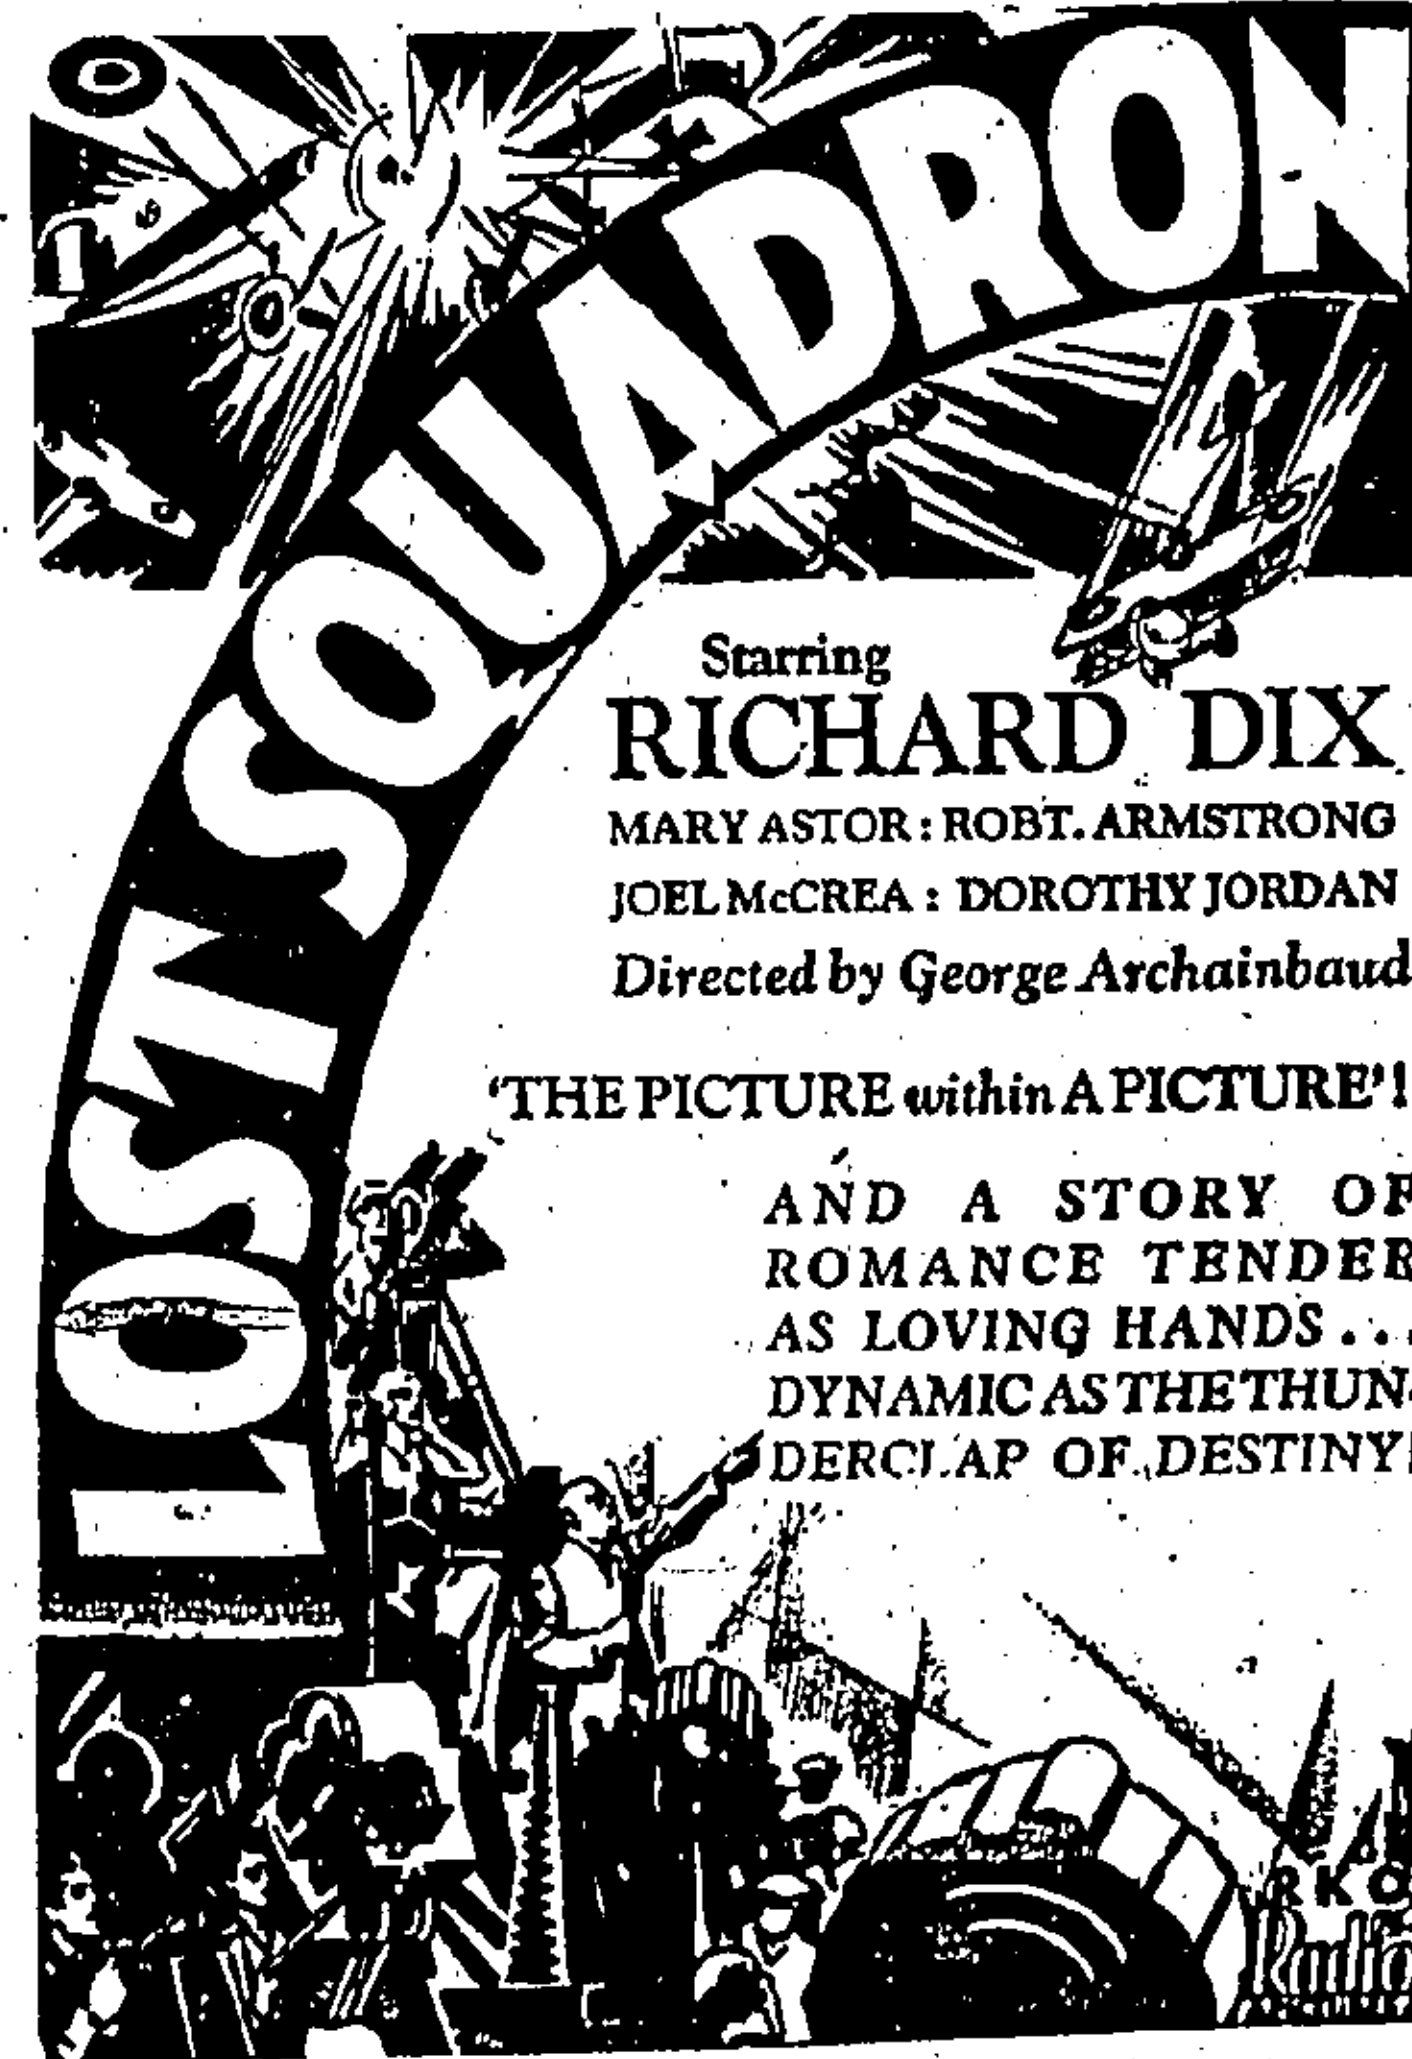

The dead woman showed no signs of outward violence, and her death was apparently caused by drowning.

The name of the Far East Brewery, Distillers and Dairy Farm Ltd., has been struck off the register.
